Labor Wants Profit Limit After Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFLCIO President George Meany said today organized labor will insist that profits be included by President Nixon in any new economic restraints imposed after the wage-price freeze.

"This is the condition we've laid down for labor cooperation," Meany said in a television interview shortly before he and other labor chiefs were to meet with Nixon at the White House

"The idea that profits are too low depends on what books you use," Meany said on the NBC's Today show.

He said he and other labor leaders meeting with Nixon will a tinsist that workers get back pay for wage hikes held up during the 90-day freeze.

He said labor will fight Nixon's proposed business investment tax credit in Congress because "we have no evidence that the investment tax credit will create a single job."

The labor chiefs summoned to the meeting by Nixon are among some of the bitterest critics of his economic program. A principal concern of the leaders is what should follow the 90-day wage-price freeze.

"He'll be listening," Secretary of Labor J. D. Hodgson told United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock of Nixon's attitude toward this first meeting with union chiefs since the freeze began Aug. 15.

"I don't think they are going to call us in and say 'you write the ticket," Woodcock said in an interview.

But he added that Labor Department officials told him the administration hasn't closed its mind to one of labor's biggest demands—retroactive pay for all negotiated wage hikes held up by the freeze, and all scheduled wage hikes due later under current contracts.

"The whole question is open," Woodcock said after the meeting with Hodgson and Asst. Secretary of Labor W. J. Usery. The Auto Workers have threatened to cancel contracts covering some 600,000 workers with major auto firms if they don't get pay hikes due in November and December.

The issue of recovering frozen pay hikes is also vital to several other leaders invited by Nixon — United steelworkers President I. W. Abel who won 30 per cent in wage hikes over three years for some 350,000 steelworkers last month, and President Joseph A. Beirne of the Communications Workers whose union approved a similar wage hike for 500,000 telephone workers just before the freeze.

Nixon told Congress Thursday the 90-day freeze will end as scheduled Nov. 13.

"But I assure the Congress and the American people that when this first temporary and necessarily drastic action is over, we shall take all the steps needed to see that America is not again afflicted by the virus of runaway inflation," Nixon said.

Business leaders have been invited to see Nixon Monday, agriculture leaders Tuesday and congressional leaders Sept. 17, the White House said.

Woodcock said Hodgson told him the labor leaders will be consulted continuously as Nixon shapes his post-freeze policy.

Woodcock said labor leaders still oppose Nixon's proposed business investment tax credit as a "give-away" to major corporations, and will fight it in Congress.

Nixon, urging Congress to enact the measure, said it would encourage business to invest in new plant equipment to create more jobs. But Woodcock argued the corporations would probably buy equipment displacing workers, and thereby worsen the unemployment rate which stands near a nineyear high.

Woodcock said he would propose to Nixon a permanent wage-price review board with power to subpoena company and union leaders for questioning about any price or wage hikes con idered excessive, but qith no power to block such hikes except through focusing "the power of public opinion" on them.

Meany has said organized labor could cooperate in a laborindustry public board to curb inflation if the board set its own regulations without edicts from the government, even though the government might retain power to punish violators of board decisions.

Bond Threatens Own Suit

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Democratic Revenue Director James E. Schaffner has filed one suit in a continuing feud over access to income tax returns and now Republican State Auditor Christopher "Kit" Bond is threatening to do the same.

Bond said Thursday he has asked Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth to investigate the possibility of legal action to make Schaffner cough up the returns.

Bond said he didn't want to audit them, but needed to have access to them in order to continue his audit of the Department of Revenue. He said his auditors need to know how much money came in, how it was handled and where it went.

Unless he gets immediate access to the returns, Bond said, there is no assurance they'll still be available later. He noted two mysterious fires Feb. 19 and May 3 destroyed some Revenue Department records.

In a confrontation with Schaffner Wednesday, Deputy Auditor Robert L. James demanded to see the income tax records and Schaffner turned him down.

Schaffner filed a suit, in Cole County Circuit Court last week to determine whether he can legally disclose information in the tax returns. He took the position he would be criminally liable if he made them available.

But Bond said the attorney general ruled previously it would be all right to turn records over to a data processing firm for handling and Schaffner would not incur any criminal liability.

He also noted that in the last audit of the income tax unit, in the summer of 1969, Democratic Auditor Haskell Holman's staff was allowed to see income tax returns.

"The director of revenue has no right to determine which records will or will not be made availabe for examination by the state auditor," Bond said.

"By Constitution and statutes we are given the right to access to such records as are necessary to conduct audits in accordance with sound governmental practices."

In response to a reporter's question, Bond said his inquiry into Revenue Department operations had nothing to do with reports that he might seek the Republican nomination for governor.

He said all he wanted to do was perform the duties of his office as state auditor properly.

Fire Origin Sought

Firemen this morning are examining the remains of a two-story frame home that burned last night to find the cause of the fire.

A call from an unidentified screaming woman at 10:18 p.m. last night brought firemen to the Thomas Dunn house at 810 North Ranney. When firemen arrived flames were shooting from the south upstairs window and the roof and the fire was burning out of control.

Apparently the fire started in an upstairs bedroom and spread to the rest of the house. The cause of the fire is unknown. The inside of the house was gutted but little damage was done to the exterior.

When firemen arrived, a call was placed for assistance from a second fire engine.

Firemen said they were surprised they saved anything. The fire was coming out of the roof.

The Dunns were away, but a smaller house at the rear of the Dunn property was occupied by young people. Police had been called to the smaller house moments before the fire alarm when a neighbor said that apparently a party was in progress and complained of a disturbance.

Patrolman Sammie Hinton warned the young people and left. He said he drove about three blocks from the house and noticed flames coming from the roof of the larger house. Hinton radioed the call to a police dispatcher and the firemen were alerted.

Nearly 1,700 feet of water hose were laid in fighting the blaze, but firemen were hampered by motorists, apparently from the party, who ran over the fire hoses.

One hose was broken and words were exchanged between a firemen and a party goer.

Webb said the loss of the fire hose was not a major problem in fighting the blaze but added that it could have been a danger to the firemen handling the hose. Webb said that the sudden release of pressure from a water hose when broken could throw a fireman from a ladder.

Firemen worked more than two hours in extinguishing the blaze.

Easton Bound Over

CHARLESTON — Matthew Easton, Jr., 42, Charleston, was bound over to circuit court Thursday following a preliminary hearing on a second degree murder charge before Magistrate T. J. Brown, Jr.

Easton is accused in the shooting of Leroy Johnson of Charleston. Johnson was shot in the stomach with a 38 caliber pistol August 14. He died in the Missouro Delta Community hospital in Sikeston Aug. 19.

Bond was reduced from $5,000 to $1,000. Easton did not post bond and is in the Mississippi county jail.

Call on Oran Mayor Critic

Postal Response Made

ORAN— Two representatives of Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, Washington D.C., met with Mayor Kenneth Ransdell and Postmaster Elwood Thompson Thursday afternoon to discuss the declining postal service. Ransdell has protested the decline.

David Ordway, from the consumer advocate office of the postmaster general, and Herman Dodson, special advisor to the office of the postmaster general, talked with Ransdell, Thompson, and employees of the post office for nearly three hours on how much mail is handled by the post office and the ways postal service has been cut.

"We presented our case to the two men from the standpoint of not just Oran but the Oran area," Mayor Ransdell said. "Approximately 25,000 persons are affected by our postal service."

Ransdell said the representatives "seemed rather responsive" to the postal situation but "were unable to tell us anything substantial now." He said the city won't know anything until after the two men make their report to the postmaster general. He said he had no idea when that would be.

The mayor commented:

"I think the reason they came down here was a combination of letters that we sent to Missouri senators (Thomas F. Eagleton and Stuart Symington) and the President and because of the press coverage we have gotten in your paper and on area television."

In Ransdell's letter to President Nixon, he said "the post office department has cut our Sunday and holiday service 100 per cent, our Saturday service 75 per cent, our weekday service 50 per cent, raised our postage 25 per cent,

5,000 See Sky, Float Show in Portageville

By NADINE TOWNSEND

PORTAGEVILLE — A skydiving exhbition and grand float parade at the 24th annual National Soybean Festival was viewed by more than 5,000 Thursday night.

A three-man parachuting team from Bootheel Sport Parachuting Center, Kennett, landed on target at 7:15 p.m. on Main Street, and was followed by a mile long, 41-unit parade of marching bands, floats commemorating Missouri's 150 years of statehood and queen contestants.

First prize of $150 in float competition went to the Trinity Baptist Church float depicting famous Missourians.

Kiwanis Club float simulating a Mississippi river sternwheeler won second prize of $100. The old band stand float entered by Portageville Garden club received third place award of $50.

Judges were Mrs. Ruby McClure, Gideon; Mrs, Vera Ashley and Mrs. Dot Scobey, both of New Madrid.

High school bands participating were from Bernie, Campbell, Caruthersville, Gideon, North Pemiscot, New Madrid, Parma, Senath-Hornersville and Portageville.

A National Soybean dance, sponsored by the Jaycees, is tonight at the armory following a football game between the Portageville Bulldogs and St. Vincent of Perryville at Reaves athletic field. Music will be provided by the Interstate 55 band of Memphis.

Activities Saturday include a tractor pulling contest at 6:30 p.m. at Meatte Memorial City Park. A beauty pageant is scheduled at 8 p.m. at the high school gymnasium. Among contestants registered are Sue Ellen Mills, Lilbourn; Sherrie Sherrod, Marston; Suzanne Williams, Portageville; Ann Hillis, Portageville; Dianna Werner, Gideon; Amenda Smith, Portageville; Debbie Kinley, Caruthersville; Melanie Barnes, Steele; Elizabeth Ann Harper, Sikeston; Judy Green, Kennett; Jeanne Copeland, Portageville; Patti McCarroll, Malden; and Linda Lou McCready, Portageville.

Slaying Case Motions

BENTON — William Timothy Kirk of Sikeston, accused of murder, entered two motions in circuit court Thursday before Circuit Judge Marshall Craig.

His attorney filed a motion to require the state to produce any favorable evidence toward their client and filed a second motion to supress evidence.

The motion to supress evidence grew from a charge by Kirk's attorneys that Kirk's car was taken illegally by Sheriff John Dennis and searched for evidence.

During the search, Dennis found a substance on the floor board mat that resembled bfood. The mat was sent to highway patrol labratory headquarters in Jefferson City, but the results of the test haven't been disclosed.

Kirk is charged with the fatal shooting of 25-year-old James Allen Roose in July. Roose was found dead on Ables Road, south of Sikeston in Miner. He had been shot four times in the face at close range by a .38 caliber pistol.

Kirk was bound over to circuit court following his preliminary hearing in Sikeston.

Judge Craig set Sept. 23 as the date to hear the two motions filed by Kirk's

TIME TO EXPOSE
REFLEX LIBERALISM

Conditioned liberals, who react to the merest tinkle of Pavlov's bell, need exposure in the worst sort of way. Up to now they have had it nearly all their way.

If they uttered the word "patriot," their bearded and long-haired followers would laugh in ridicule. If they said "Communist," a great chorus of "McCarthysim!" would make the welkin ring. This would be followed by echoes: "Imperialist! Wormonger! Xenophobe! Reactionary! Fink! Redbaiter!"

Some of these intellectuals and pseudo-intellectuals are pushing the line that nationalism and patriotism are old hat. They seek a coalition with Communists, thereby suppressing the great differences between honest progressives and totalitarian gangsters. To make the coalition work they would expunge such words as "patriot" that made America great because such terms stand for strength, integrity, freedom, order under law, the right to own land and other property, and the duty to protect those rights.

The reflex liberals take a position above the battle. They advocate no-win wars, along with unilateral disarmament to the point of defenselessness. The trouble with such a doctrine is that the Soviets and the Red Chinses would simply wait until the United States was naked — like a plucked chicken ready for the knife. It is high time to expose the sophomoric and dangerous shallowness of the liberal approach to domestic and foreign affairs.

PUERTO RICAN
INDEPENDENTISTAS

There may be a hint -- hopefully without the violence -- of West Side Story when Puerto Rican independence forces stage their biggest-ever demonstration on Sunday, Sept. 12, in New York City. The Young Lords and the Puerto Rican Student Union, both supporting independence for the island and severence of all U.S. ties, are expected to participate in large numbers. The demonstrations will coincide with the annual National Governors Conference in San Juan. And it precedes the Sept. 21 opening of the UN General Assembly where Cuba reportedly is planning to introduce a resolution for Puerto Rican independence.

The three-sided political struggle on the island among those favoring continued commonwealth status, those desiring statehood and those advocating independence show the independentistas in the minority. A 1967 plebiscite found over 60 per cent in favor of commonwealth, 38 per cent for statehood and less than one per cent for independence. In the last election in 1968, the independence parties won only 3 per cent of the vote. But the independence movement has been winning new recruits, especially among younger people, and some observers believe that the independence parties could capture up to 10 per cent of the vote in the 1972 elections.

With little hope of electoral victory, the more radical independentistas have turned to violence. Since 1967, there have been over 150 incidences of bombing and arson of U.S. - owned businesses. The Armed Revolutionary Independence Movement and the Revolutionary Armed Liberation Movement, Puerto Rico's most militant leftist organizations, have taken credit for much of the violence. Government officials claim that these groups are led by a cadre of pro-independence Communists who have been trained in Cuba. Perto Rican governor Louis A. Ferre feels that the independentistas are fighting a losing battle because Puerto Rico's commonwealth status has given the island the highest standard of living in Latin America. One young Puerto Rican favoring independence explained: "The people don't feel they are exploited by the United States. All they can see are the schools, hospitals, phones and electricity."

PEOPLE VERSUS
FEDERAL BUREAUCRACY

A returning vacationer from Colorado reports an interesting incident which may become a testing ground between the people and Federal bureaucracy.

Montezuma county and several individual citizens of that farming area are suing the Colorado Department of Social Services which runs welfare in the state, to avoid being saddled with more costs of welfare administration. Adding to the situation is the fact that the State of Colorado is going to sue nearby Weld county because the board of supervisors there has decided to pull out of any participation in the welfare program.

Montezuma county, whose county seat is Cortez, is an agricultural county of 13,000 people, but it is currently supporting a welfare staff of fourteen people, and the state is seeking to force them to bring this total up to 21 people.

According to the county clerk's office there are 457 in the county on old age pensions, 137 family units in the aid to dependent children program, 62 adults with a total of 113 children, 25 clients for day care, 21 clients in foster homes for child welfare, 1 tuberculosis patient, 65 needy disabled, 9 on general assistance which takes in medical care, eyeglasses and similar matters.

This apparently adds up to a total of 700 cases, currently being handled by a staff of 14 which includes a director of welfare, a casework supervisor, 6 caseworkers, a food stamp cashier and various other titles.

What apparently brought matters to a head is that the county supervisors fired a caseworker who is suing for back pay. The state welfare agency is demanding the caseworker's reinstatement, plus the hiring of six more on the welfare staff in Montezuma county, plus the provision for more office space and facilities. This would result in a ratio of one welfare worker to less than 35 cases.

To make the situation more confusing, the Colorado legislature prescribes in detail how much taxes a county can levy for specific purposes. Under the law, Montezuma county can only levy a tax of three mills for welfare. The county has now run out of this fund. But in far off Washington, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has decreed that unless Montezuma county performs according to the prescribed program, it will cut off the Federal payments to the entire state of Colorado which amount to 80 per cent of the state welfare expenditures. This has created heavy pressure on the county by the state administration to dig up the money in some way, even though the State legislature so far says the county cannot legally do this.

But there is a lesson to be learned from this situation in Montezuma county -- that more and more people are beginning to view any money given by the Federal government with fear and suspicion because of the strings attached. This applies to more than welfare as the schools, colleges and other community factors can attest.

BUSINESS MEN ARE LIKE
THE BASHFUL BOY WHO SENT
HIS GIRL A VALENTINE
BUT DIDN'T SIGN IT

— and then wondered why she didn't smile on him, next time they met.

It is business whose taxes support America's schools 1½ days every week.

It is business men whose companies and private gifts largely assure the success of hospital and charity drives and pay for the research seeking to cure disease and poverty.

It is business that is pouring money into cleaning up slums, and training the hardcore unemployed.

It is business whose research (and, yes, search for legitimate profit) has so improved home appliances and factory machines that work on them is done better and easier in 7 hours that used to take 12, and used to make us old men and women at 40.

But do you ever see these dramatic facts on TV? Or featured in your newspaper?

Business men say they're too busy to talk about such things. So they "hid their light under a bushel" — and wonder why it smothers there.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes it just doesn't pay to be thrifty. Take my frugal daughter's recent attempt to save $12 by flying to Canada on youth fare.

Having earned the money herself, she was reluctant to part with any more of it than was absolutely necessary to get her from New York to Toronto, where she was to board a train for Vancouver, British Columbia.

She started out a day ahead of time, arriving at the airport early in the morning with a standby plane ticket, a bright yellow backpack, a suitcase, a totebag, a coat, a purse and a combination radio-phonograph.

The situation looked promising. The airline relieved Gay of her luggage and soon she was trotting out to the plane, muttering smugly to herself, "A penny saved is a penny earned."

But what she should have been saying was "Don't count your chickens before they are hatched." At the last moment a full-paying customer dashed aboard and it was back to the departure lounge for Gay.

It turned out all the other flights to Toronto were fully booked, as well as the ones the next day that would get her there in time to make train connections. So she decided to take a plane to Buffalo, and a bus from there. She was duly ushered aboard, only to be dumped again just before takeoff.

With a fist full of dimes and a heart full of hope—both of which rapidly diminished—she then started calling all the other airlines that fly to Canada. But the Labor Day weekend was approaching and there were no seats available even at full fare.

A quick call to the bus terminal revealed that the only bus that would complete its 12hour trip in time to make the train would be leaving in little more than an hour. Gay rushed frantically to cash in her ticket, retrieve her baggage and make a dash into town.

But the luggage was already winging to Toronto in the plane she was on originally. She was advised to go out to the airport when she got there and pick it up, but the drawback to this simple plan was that in the confusion she had lost the baggage checks. A sympathetic airline employe called Toronto to explain that someone would turn up the next day for the impedimenta, which should be released to her despite lack of formal claim papers.

All well and good, except that there remained the possibility, not entirely unknown in airline operations, that the luggage might not appear where and when it was supposed to, and the harried traveler had visions of embarking on a three-day cross-country train trip without even a change of hair ribbons.

Well, she made the bus and she got her stuff in Toronto and she didn't miss the train. But the whole thing cost her a little more than anticipated:

Transportation from airport to New York City bus terminal; person-to-person telephone call at day rates to friend in Toronto she was to have spent the night with; transportation to airport and back to pick up luggage; and—cruellest blow of all—as the refund for her standby ticket she was inadvertently given $10 too little, a fact that in her agitated state she didn't discover until she opened her wallet to buy the bus ticket.

HOW TO KEEP THE LID ON

Now that the shock of President Nixon's announcement of a tough, new economic policy has worn off, the question is: How will the nation respond to it?

The initial reaction has been good. Both businessmen and workers had come to realize they were getting nowhere with the inflation that was taking money out of pockets faster than it could put it in. They were ready for a change, for strong national leadership.

It was unfortunate that the administration did not have a well developed contingency plan ready for the change. Some quiet advance planning could have prevented some of the confusion that is developing over details of the interim program the President announced over the weekend. But thus far there has been general acceptance of this oversight and recognition of the fact that the President felt he faced a national emergency.

How well the government lid can be kept on the conomy will depend upon continued public acceptance of the need and congressional actions to supplement the orders already issued by the President.

Workers who had been scheduled for cost of living increases, promotions in grade or previously negotiated wage increases will be the most unhappy about the new orders, because they will limit spending in the year ahead even though some financial commitments already had been made on the expected increases. Those workers will need to show patience until the 90-day period is ended to see what sort of accommodations the administration will be able to work out for them.

Even those who are hit directly by the orders can take some comfort in the fact that their expenses will not rise above what they have been.

And, of course, everyone will be watching closely to see what Congress does in response to the President's call for tax reductions. There had been considerable demand in Congress for such action even before the President made his move.There is goodchance, therefore, that Congress will act speedily on that aspect of the program when it reconvenes and even that it may go somewhat beyond what the president has asked in an effort to stimulate the economy. That, together with a strenuous effort to keep interest rates down, should produce more bargains for the individual consumers within the next year than he possibly could have achieved through the higher wage and higher - price spiral.

THE PLAN WILL WORK, with minor adjustments, if everyone really is convinced it is workable. Everyone will have to sacrifice a little for the greater gain ahead. Anyone — worker, merchant, manufacturer, or banker — who tries to circumvent the plan will be endangering all of it and damaging himself as much as those who have to pay the higher prices he asks.

Everyone should realize, too, that chiseling will lead to demands for even tougher controls and continuance of the regulation of the economy for a longer period than will be necessary if all cooperate from the start.

Thetitle of the following poem is "The Bee and The Cow" and the author is a man known as Anonymous:

'Twas a sunny morn in June,
The bee had put his pipes atune,
And buzzed his way across the field.
He buzzed and ate full many an hour,
Then crawled into a dainty flower
And curled himself up for a nap
The same as any drowsy chap.
A cow came browsing through the moor,
And towards the little flowerlet bore.
Not knowing that the bee was there
So rudely wakened from his doze
His beeship's fiery temper rose —
"Old cow," he said, "I'll sting you deep
When I have finished with my sleep."
So, cuddled in his darksome den,
Eftsoon, he went to sleep again.
He slumbered on 'til early dawn,
But, when he woke, the cow was gone!

RED "JUSTICE"

The radical element of this country which is protest prone, especially when it becomes outraged over the doings of "imperialistic Uncle Sam," ought to study the case of poor Vladimir Dremlyuga, 31, of Leningrad. Vladimir has caught it twice from Soviet courts, the last a three-year stretch for making a remark in prison about the Soviet Union being a police state. He already was doing time for protesting in Red Square back in 1968 against the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia. That mistake cost him three years also.

Such are the affairs of justice in a people's socialistic country where the thing to do is scream about the imperialistic Yankees and ignore Russian invasions of Czechoslovakia and Hungary and any of her other neighbors that might not be confirming with the communist way of doing things.

In view of Mr. Dremlyuga's experience, one could safely conclude, it seems, that the constitution of the U.S.S.R. does not have a First Amendment guaranteeing freedom of speech. But those in this country who preach the radical line of the socialistic countries rely heavily on that freedom, including the right to protest the arrest of law violators who swarm into Washington occasionally to frustrate and paralyze the government. It is unlikely that anyone will protest Mr. Dremlyuga's fate. And that includes the professional radical element in the U.S.

Maybe the case of Dremlyuga will cause some of the misled who dwell in our midst to pause and think. Maybe they will conclude that they do protesteth too much.

WASHINGTON-- The FBI's use of lie detectors to locate news leaks may be upsetting to the New York Times. But for us, it's strictly routine.

Long ago, we became resigned to this sort of intimidation. We've counted as many as 18 FBI agents at one time searching for our sources. They've used not only lie detectors but third-degree methods and grand jury subpoenas.

The latest investigation was touched off, the press reported, by a New York Times account on July 22 of the secret U.S. position at the strategic arms limitation talks.

Actually, Attorney General John Mitchell began investigating news leaks last spring. He ordered the FBI, specifically, to find out who was slipping us Pentagon secrets often intended for the "eyes only" of the top brass.

Military gumshoes grilled suspects behind the doors of room 3E993 at the Pentagon. FBI agents followed up, flashing their credentials and asking terse questions. Lie detectors were used; some suspects were tailed; their neighbors were questioned.

At least one suspect, a mild, bespectacled Pentagon aide named Gene Smith, was badgered, threatened, cursed and, finally, subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury in Norfolk, Va. But unhappily, the vaunted FBI had fingered the wrong man. Smith denied under oath that he had given us so much as the time of day.

U.S. Attorney Brian Gettings admitted to us afterward that a "federal agency" had suggested he go after Smith. "We probably do have the wrong man," the chastened prosecutor adknowledged.

TRIPLE THREAT

With the publication of the Pentagon papers, Mitchell broadened his investigation of news leaks. Then in July, the gumshoes moved into the State Department after the appearance of three more sensitive stories:

2. Another New York Times report by Tad Szulc about arms shipments to Pakistan; and

3. A column by us quoting from a State Department message that had been hand-carried in a sealed envelope to U.S. AID Administrator John Hannah.

Were these news leaks "prejudicial to the national interest," as State Department spokesman Robert McCloskey claimed? Or do government officials use the security stamp to cover up their mistakes and to manage the news for political purpose?

Let's take the message that was delivered to Hannah in a sealed envelope. This was a hush-hush report from our Ambassador to Kenya, Robinson McIlvaine, on the highjinks of the AID administrator in Kenya. It was classified, we believe, solely to spare the involved officials from embarrassment.

But admittedly, the Pentagon investigation was triggered by our publication of sensitive information. We reported, for example. that Gen. Creighton Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, had been asked to draw up top-secret contingency plans last October for a three-day, seven-day or ten-day aerial assault upon North Vietnam. We revealed no military details, except that the contingency plans included the bombing and mining of Haiphong harbor.

Here was evidence that President Nixon was preparing plans to expand the war at the same time that he was promising to curtail it. We thought it was in the public interest to print the story.

OFFICIAL DESCREPANCY

We also revealed that MACSOG teams, composed of U.S. special forces and South Vietnamese rangers, continued to operate inside Cambodia and Loas at the same time our spokesmen were claiming no American troops were in those countries. We cited secret messages, which referred to the Cambodian raids by the code name "Salem House" and to the Loas raids as "Prairie Fire."

Again we felt the public was entitled to know about this little discrepancy.

Perhaps the story that caused the most embarrassment (and produced the most intensive investigation) was our disclosure that the U.S. had been intercepting South Vietnamese President Thieu private communications. These were picked up and decoded by the National Security Agency, then passed on to the White House and other agencies. The intercepted messages were identified by the code name "Gout."

This unpleasant revelation, no doubt, was awkward for the U.S. But we strongly believe that, in a democracy, the people have the right to know what their officials are doing. Since no military security was involved, we published the story.

For the same reason, we reported that Adm. Thomas Moorer, the Joint Chiefs' chairman, received a "Flash" message after the daring Son Tay raid informing him that the North Vietnamese prison compound hadn't been occupied for three months.

The real reason for the news-leak investigations, in our opinion, is to scare government employees into silence so they won't give out information that their bosses don't want the public to know.

No less than State Secretary Bill Rogers, a former Attorney General acknowledged that the lie detector "is not a very good instrument, in my opinion, for showing guilt." It is a good instrument, however, for intimidating State Department officials.

For the men who govern us, in order to remain in power, would like to control what we are told about their administration.

Inside Labor

Warning the President:
Meany Approves strikes for all lost pay the very minute freeze is over

WASHINGTON: There's always a first time andpink-shirted George Meany, a most modish patriarch who avers he never did call or lead a strike, chomped on roast beef instead of the now most famous cigar in the land, and laid it on the line at lunch the other day.

In effect, he warned President Nixon that if he (Meany) led a national union instead of the coalition of unions known as the AFL-CIO, he would give the President about one second after the freeze before he would call a strike if employers refused to make good all economic gains frozen during the freeze.

In effect, Meany called for instant strikes, deferred strikes to whirl out if deferred wages and cost-of-living increases were not paid retroactively.

This may have been a roundhouse swing by the heavyweight chief of chiefs to frighten President Nixon. If it was, it missed. During his 11-minute Labor Day address the President knowingly and deliberately brushed off virtually all of labor's criticism and the implied wave of strikes. This the President did by wrapping the labor assault up in one phrase as that of a "special interest" group.

But George Meany, who really hasn't been a plumber for some 50 years, makes no idle threats. Judge for yourselves. Here's how he put it when asked whether he would prefer to renegotiate contracts after the freeze rather than see the workers denied deferred raises:

"Well, I don't know." said the chief of the biggest labor complex in the free world. "If it was my contract--if I were the head of a union and had one of these contracts--the very day the freeze was over, I would say, 'Mr. Employer, come on, give it to me.' No renegotiation, go on strike that very minute for violation of contract. Now that would be my approach."

Meany-watchers know that when the veteran chief says "that very minute" he doesn't mean 90 seconds later. Later he was asked if the obtaining of deferred wages and benefits retroactively after the freeze was a non-negotiable demand.

"Well, I can't speak for the unions," said the chief who has been known to do just that, "that have these contracts. They have to speak for themselves. My attitude would be that if I were charged with taking care of the affairs of the union and had one of these contracts, the day the freeze was over I would say, 'Mr. Employer, I want that money for my members. It's just as simple as that.' And if they come up with something that bars unions from making that sort of demand, hell, I don't see how labor could be a party to this because this is government control."

Then Meany said that labor would cooperate if "they" came up with a voluntary wage-price monitoring system.

Meany, now one of the nation's glamour stories, was probably more graphic than some of his colleagues, except one. He is the United Auto Workers General Motors (GM) Department Director Irving Bluestone, who said, "I think all hell is going to break loose" when "the men realize they're not getting the money they struck for."

That could be. Certainly Meany's words, though the United Auto Workers Union (UAW) is independent of the AFL—CIO, will have their impact on well over a million workers--especially those UAW members who are due for productivity and cost-of-living increases the end of November and beginning of December.

UAW Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey, speaking in that velvet glove, iron-fist tone of his, reported a million workers are due for such increases then --"coming to some $800,000 a day for GM employes alone." During the freeze "workers in 801 plants are due wage increases affecting 216,554 employes including some of the biggest such as Caterpillar Tractor Co. and Bendix."

Mazey said the union would appeal the ban on wage increases, etc., to the Cost of Living Council. Also, there are 170 contracts terminating during the freeze affecting 100,000 UAW members and he adds, "It will be impossible to negotiate a contract because we don't know what will happen after Nov. 13. So we are negotiating in a no-man's land."

Leonard Woodcock, president of the 1.4 million auto workers, can be counted on to declare some kind of war on the White House at the union's special Nov. 13 (Detroit) convention-- if there is no promise of full retroactivity. And who knows if this won't be taken as a signal for local strikes?

There's much the same sentiment in the usually "quiet man," I.W. "Abe" Abel, who not only heads the United Steelworkers of America but also the AFL-CIO'S Industrial Union Dept.--scheduled for a national convention in October. Abel told me he believes there is no sense in renegotiating the contracts which were so dramatically settled in "can, aluminum, copper and steel" since the year's beginning.

"Our feeling is that these agreements are legal and binding," says he, "and whatever provisions are in them certainly we expect fulfilled. While the freeze may prohibit them during the freeze, when it's lifted however, we want their application. If employers try to renege, strong differences of opinion will develop. And some action, you can be sure.

"I would assume that any local union which has a commitment when the freeze ends will insist there is no merit in renegotiation."

This means--strikes. If walkouts for money gains--economic packages--are banned by Presidential directive, who can stop "non=economic" strikes, or hitting the bricks on grievances?

This is the spectre with which Meany is haunting President Nixon -- strikes in steel, coal, rails, auto, waterfront, etc. For in the final analysis, between elections, if clout comes to clout, labor's punch maily mainly is in hitting the bricks. This the President knows. So watch his fast footwork.

Quail Season to Begin on Nov. 10

By RON JAYNES

The four-man Missouri Conservation commission, meeting in Sikeston Thursday, set Nov. 10 as the opening day of quail season and delayed setting of bag limit and length of season until its October meeting.

Larry R. Gale, associate director of the conservation department, noted that the quail population looks about the same as last year. He said he sees some increase in the south and southwest portions of the state. He predicted a decline in the northwest due to weather conditions.

Robert G. DeLaney of Charleston, commission vice chairman, noted that if the prediction of low of quail numbers holds true in the South, the commission will come under fire from residents who urged that the season be cut last season. The biologists felt that it would be of no advantage to close the season.

The commisssion was criticized for the action, DeLaney said.

The commission. headed by Harry Mills of Clinton, received reports from Carl R. Noren, conservation department director. Larry R. Gale, P. G. Barnickal and Allen Grohn, Associate directors and Julien L. O. 'Malley, legal counsel.

There was a discussion on the teal season. It was pointed out that the season has been set for sunrise until 1 hour before sunset but federal law specifies sunrise to sunset.

The citizens committee for Conservation was praised for its work, but it was noted that the group was on financially rocky roads. The citizens group seeks to provide more public lands for Missourians for recreation purposes.

It calls for construction of 30 small lakes, 10 large impoundments and 80 lakes inside urban areas.

A proposal by the committee to purchase 50,000 acres of forest and lease another 300,000 acres would be financed through a tax on soft drinks.

Noren noted that 301 men will be tested Saturday for 18 conservation agent job openings. The tests will be followed by interviews and prospective agents will undergo a four-month training course after Jan. 1, 1972.

The next monthly meeting was set for Branson, Oct. 5 and 6.

CHARLOTTE LANPHER

Mrs. Lanpher was born in Cape Girardeau, MO. and her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jim Burris of Route 4, Sikeston, Mo. She attended Vanduser grade school and graduated from Scott County Central High School. She then attended Western Kentucky State University at Bowling Green, Kentucky. She received her B. S. degree from Southeast Missouri State.

Mrs. Lanpher resides at Route 1, Benton Mo. with her husban Nick, who is basketball coach at Kelly High School.They have two daughters, Monica Kaye who is 4 ½ years old and Krista Nichelle 7 ½ months.

Mrs. Lanpher's hobbies include sewing and making craft objects. She also enjoys decorating her home.

When ask her opinion of the students of OHS Mrs. Lanpher replyed: "I hope that through my work, girls will be encouraged to further their education in college home economics or other areas. I have already found that many of the girls in my classes have the material to further their education. Some just need an extra boost of encouragement."

JOE SCOTT

"Good discipline, lost of hustle, being able to put out 100%, and team work," are the outstanding qualities Coach Scott will attain from the varsity squad.

Coach Scott, a previous Oran Coach, has been teaching at West Side High School, right outside Jonesboro, Arkansas. Although, West Side is a larger school, he doesn't feel they have any advantages over Oran.

After seeing the boys in practice for only a few days, Scott has already decided that he has plans for a good season. Scott admits that the aspect of the game he likes best is, "Being ahead at the end of the game."

Coach Scott feels that school enthusiasm and support are important throughout the season. He is interested in promoting the support of our student body, in return the boys will be encouraged to do their best on the court.

As the 71-72 basketball season rolls around lets all put every effort forward to show Coach Scott and all the players that we are supporting them in every way we can!

LANA COX

Miss Lana Cox is beginning her teaching career as 3rd grade teacher of Oran Elementary School. Although this is her first year to teach, she has definite ideas about methods of teaching. She thinks school should be enjoyable, and as a teacher try to make it fun for the students while learing.

Miss Cox lives at Chaffee, Mo. where she attended High School. She later attended college at Southeast Missouri State.

Cox Named Officer of Educators

As secretary of the international organization, Dr. Cox, who is also an assistant professor in the department of industrial and technical education at Southeast Missouri State, will be responsible for conducting officer elections for the next two years and maintaining the membership list of IGAEA.

The new officer has been a member of the Southeast Missouri State faculty since 1964. Born in Fisher, Ark., he finished high school in Little Rock and attended Kansas State Teachers College at Pittsburg for both his bachelor's and master's degrees.

His doctorate in education was awarded by the University of Arkansas in January, 1970.

Dr. Cox taught in the public schools for nine years before coming to Southeast Missouri State. He is a member of the local, state, and national education associations and a life member of the American Industrial Arts Association.

Had N.Y. State Senator Thomas Platt approved of Theodore Roosevelt's policies as governor of New York, the energetic Roosevelt might never have become president. To "kick him upstairs," Platt nominated him to the obscurity of the vice-presidency, The World Almanac notes.

Fall Classes Begin at State College

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Southeast Missouri State College campus has been a beehive of activity all week, and students plunge headlong into fall semester classes Thursday.

It will probably be at least Monday however, before the student body realizes it must settle down to the serious business of getting an education. For in addition to completing the enrollment process and making class schedule changes this week, the students have been enjoying nightly extra- curricular activities.

These will continue through Sunday. They include the college's first football game of the season Saturday night.

Classes will continue uninterrupted until the Thanksgiving holiday which begins at noon on Nov. 24. Classes will resume at 8 a.m. on Nov. 29 and continue through Dec. 17 when the college will break for Christmas.

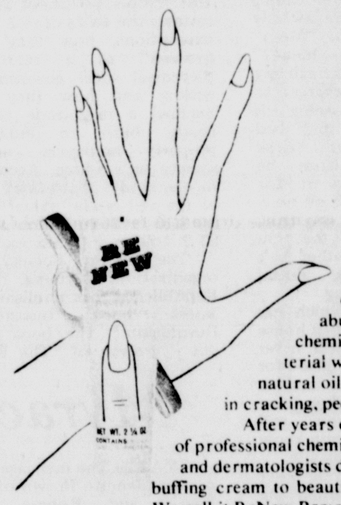

The semester's final countdown will begin at 8 a.m. Jan. 3, with final examinations set for Jan. 17-20. Prior to the exams, however, Southeast Missouri State will stage its first mid - year commencement ever.

This will come on Jan. 18. In the past students who completed their degree requirements did not formally receive their diplomas until the traditional spring graduation ceremonies.

Amazing nail beauty for problem nails, splitting chipping, etc.

In this modern age, your nails are constantly being abused by detergents, chemicals and other material which causes loss of natural oils in nails, resulting in cracking, peeling and chipping. After years of research, a team of professional chemists, cosmetologists and dermatologists developed a protein buffing cream to beautify unsightly nails. We call it ReNew Protein Fingernail Conditioner. ☐ Renew is not a lacquer or hardener. It's a pure fingernail conditioner containing lanolin, protein and silica. When ReNew is properly applied once a week, using our specially designed suede skin buffer, it will give your nails an appearance of being coated with a clear polish. Unlike nail polish, this sheen will not chip, crack or peel, even in dishwater. It also provides an excellent base for nail color. Polish remover will not harm the sheen. ReNew contains silica, the same type of polishing agent used by dentists. Silica is more effective than pumice in removing roughness and ridges, thus providing a higher sheen. Remember, no pre-soaking or special preparation of the nails is required before you apply ReNew fingernail conditioner. No liquid sealer is needed. When ReNew is applied once a week properly with our specially designed suede skin buffer, the roughness and ridges of your nails are smoothed away. Moisture and protein are buffed into the surface of the nails, which helps prevent dryness. The buffing action stimulates circulation for healthier nail growth.

☐ Buffing regularly with ReNew fingernail conditioner, using our specially designed buffers should help you have beautiful, healthy, cuticle free fingernails. ReNew is for the entire family, even men . . . and it's non-toxic. ☐ Save money by doing your own nails with ReNew for approximately 6c a week . . . and you, too, can enjoy beautiful nails. Order your supply of ReNew fingernail conditioner and the specially designed ReNew buffer today . . . and receive our free gift of one tube of ReNew Cuticle Conditioner.

The Years Are Short Between Kindergarten and College

By SHIRLEY PRITCHETT

Remember your first child's first day at kindergarten? How for weeks you had warned him that no amount of tears, pleading, or pretense of tummy aches would keep him from going?

Then the big day, you took him firmly by the hand, prepared yourself mentally for the ordeal you were sure was coming upon entering that classroom door; only to have him spy a friend seated at the third table, smile broadly and say "goodby mommy"— His first big step toward independence.

The short years between kindergarten and high school graduation (but weren't you glad each fall when school started) each hold memories of crisis you met, survived and tucked away with all the pleasant experiences of being a mother. Each year brought you one step closer toward the day when it finally hits you; your 18-year-old is no longer a boy. He has registered for the draft, he can vote, do most anything he would like except buy liquor, in most places, and get married without your consent.

How do you express the feeling a mother has when her first child moves out of his room and goes away to college?

I read where one mother described it this way, "It's like having a baby; no one will talk about how it really feels until your into it and it's too late."

It's a combination of many feelings all wrapped up in one big lump in your throat; a king size ache in your heart; loneliness; realization that you are getting older; highlighted by happiness and pride for he is your boy, er-man.

You prepare for the big day from high school graduation until the night before he leaves. You tell yourself you're ready, for, of course, you want him to go to school; you promise yourself you will not get teary-eyed and choked up and that you will be happy and just as excited as he as he enters the world outside your own private little domain, where you have scolded, protected, trained and guided, (not without numerous mistakes,) him.

Oh, there are many rewards in having an 18-year-old-college student. For instance; your car it's there when you need it and there's still gas in the tank; there is more food in the refrigerator and the grocery bill is cut almost in half; the stereo no longer shakes the windows; all dirty clothes can now be found in the hamper, with the exception of younger brother's this too shall pass, and not under his bed, on the desk or the closet floor; there is much less hair in the bathroom basin and one cleaning a day in the bathroom is sufficient. You no longer serve as an answering service for the telephone; and there is one less bed to make each morning.

On the other hand; It was always nice to have someone run errands , (the car made it fun); the extra money saved on food and gas doesn't quite come up to the amount you coughed up at pre-enrollment; the house can be too quiet and besided you kinda liked (parts) his taste in music; you miss the exercise from stooping to pick up his scattered belongings; dad and little brother still mess up the bathroom; the phone ringing at night just might be him calling collect but it's awfully nice to hear that, "Mom" how's things at home?" "Is it all right to call my girl and have it charged to your phone?" seeing his empty made-up bed anduncluttered desk makes you realize he won't be using it for awhile.

Going to bed at night only reminds you that you don't know whether he's safely in his dorm, hopefully studying.

Your home, which has always been an open house for his friends will never be the gathering place for his new friends and it bothers you when you think that you will probably never again know all the people in his life.

Remember having older people tell you when he was small, "enjoy your children now— right now they are stepping on your toes, later it's your heart" or "You pay for your own raising when you have children of your own"? How right they were:

Adjusting to the absence of a son, since I have no daughters but I'm sure it's the same with all mothers, is never easy regardless of the circumstances. You look in the mirror, see the new gray hair and another worry line and begin to realize it's later than you thought and that yes, you are old enough to have a son in college. Perhaps you pat yourself on the back a little, after all you have reared a handsome young man, a good boy err-man, and there is a deep sense of pride inknowing you have done your best, maybe not always but you tried, to help him become independent and capable of thinking for himself, yet there's a little feeling of sadness that he doesn't need you quite so much as he did even last year.

Now you strive to look ahead to what you hope and pray is a bright and promising future and on the horizon perhaps his total step of independence.

Could that mean another period of adjustment for you?

What step comes next?

Being a mother-in-law, what else?

USDA Supplies Background Information On Soup Recall

The recall of chicken vegetable soup produced by the Campbell's Soup Co., in Paris, Tex., includes all chicken vegetable soup embossed with the code 07 P13 on the can, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service said consumers should disregard any other numbers or letters other than the 07 P13 identification. Officials of Campbell's Soup have stated that any can bearing this code should be immediately returned to the store where it was purchased.

In response to public inquiries, USDA has the following background information regarding the Campbell's chicken vegetable soup recall:

C&MS said the first indication of a possible problem was discovered on July 16 (Friday night) when chicken vegetable soup produced on July 2 was examined after the normal 14 day incubation period. Some of the cans had developed "soft swells" (lids were slightly raised from the cans). Other cans appeared normal. These "swellers" were reported to the USDA inspector at the Paris plant on Monday, July 19. He immediately requested Campbell's to initiate a recall of all chicken vegetable soup produced on July 2. It was believed at this time that these soft swells did not pose a public health hazard.

On July 28, soft swells were noted in an incubation sample of chicken vegetable soup produced on July 15.A recall of this product was initiated. In addition, Campbell's Soup officials instructed their salesmen to check grocery shelves and warehouse stocks for product produced on June 7 and June 30 and to retain any such product found.

During an extensive examination of returned product, "hard swells" (cans with swelling on both top and bottom) were discovered on Aug. 13. The laboratory study revealed bacteria with characteristics of clostridia. These bacteria were isolated and grown in test tubes. The growth fluid subsequently was injected into unprotected mice and mice which had been protected by treatment with specific botulinal antitoxin. This is the customary laboratory procedure. On August 21, (Saturday Night) this test confirmed the finding of botulism. The same test procedure was carried out on the contents of soft swell cans, yielding a negative result.

Campbell's immediately notified USDA and the Federal Food and Drug Administration of the laboratory findings and an immediate public announcement was made on Aug. 22 (Sunday night press release USDA 2753-71). State health departments in the involved 16 States were notified immediately by telephone of the recall and were asked for their cooperation in locating the product.

Samples of chicken vegetable soup are now being analyzed in USDA laboratories in Beltsville, Md.

Warehouse stocks at the plant are being checked manually for further assurance that other soups are not involved.

Richard P. Grossenheider

Grossenheider will present a lecture-deomonstration of wildlife painting Tuesday, at 7:30 p.m. in the Dexter National Bank. There will be no admission charged. Area residents are invited to attend. An exhibit of his watercolors of wildlife will be on display in the bank and can be viewed during banking hours from Friday Sept. 24.

A zoologist and artist, Grossenheider has written and illustrated a book, "A Field Guide to the Mammels" and is working on a book about the wild canines of North America, which he will also illustrate. He has written articles for magazines and scholarly journals, including work for Life Magazine and Pic, its Australian counterpart. His radio and television experiences include a weekly conservation and natural history radio program, and he has been featured on a CBS television series on wildlife.

Art insturctors and other teachers who desire to have their students view the exhibit, may contact Bob Blankenship at the bank.

Womens Club News

Mrs. Spidell gave a report on her trip to Switzerland.

The call to prayer was read by Mrs. Opal Woolridge and the closing prayer was by Mrs. Riley Long.

The Delta Gamma chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its first regular meeting this year Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Bob Archer.

New program books were distributed and a vacation auction was held.

The program, "The Body Beautiful" was given by Mrs. Wayne Wright.

Co-hostess was Mrs. Don Pratt.

Libraries Offer A Change of Pace

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Recent additions to the Cape Girardeau public library could provide a change of pace in reading habits.

A fully documented nationwide study, "The Free List: Property Without Taxes," reviews the roots of real estate exemptions, how they "just growed" as a result of piecemeal local governmental action, and how they have reached a magnitude that is costly both to individual property taxpayers and to society as a whole. According to one study, about one - third of the real estate valuation in the U.S. — $600 billion out of $1.2 trillion — is tax exempt.

The Ripon Society, an organization of young, liberal Republicans, has published its latest book, "Instead of Revolution." The book is an out - growth of The Ripon Society's Youth Report, which was presented to President Nixon, and it consists of a series of essays which analyzes the discontents of American Youth and offers specific proposals for change.

Each year the library receives The Supreme court Review. The 1970 volume discusses the Burgher Court, church tax exemptions, freedom of the press, the Welfare Priority Hearing Cases, and the Boys Market Case.

For the camper and hiker, Merrill's The Hiker's and Packpacker's Handbook and Riviere's "Backcountry Camping" have been received.

These books are available for use by patrons of the SEMO Library System Libraries: Oran Public Library, Mississippi county library, Bollinger county library, annd Cape Girardeau public library.

Blodgett Couple Has 35th Wedding Anniversary

An open house celebrating the 35th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C.Goehri was given Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ray Beggs of Blodgett. Mrs. Beggs is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Goehri.

Giving the open house were their children, Mrs. Begg, SSG Louis C. Goehri, Jr., European Command, Germany ; Myrna Goehri Holland, San Juan, Puerto Rico; and Miss Gay Goehri.

The anniversary cake was topped with a bride and groom that was saved from a shower cake 35 years ago. Mrs. James Bryant of Sikeston and Mrs. W.A. Beggs of Blodgett served guests.

The house was decorated with coral rose buds, a gift from the children.

BADGES A MUST

DALLAS (AP) — Plainclothesmen in the Dallas police department must wear badges on their coat breast pocket and be accompanied by uniformed police when executing arrest or search warrants in the city's Mexican-American communities.

The department has distributed clip-on badges.

SKIERS' GOLD

BRECKENRIDGE, Colo. (AP) — Gold created three booms — in 1860, 1878 and 1898 — in this little town in the Blue River Valley 9,600 feet high in the Rocky Mountains, and now a fourth is under way, nurtured by the gold in skiers wallets.

Over the last decade a dozen miles of ski trails have been developed on the north face of Peak 8, overlooking the town from almost 12,000 feet altitude.

Miss Merrill Wins Wardrobe In Contest

Miss Peggy Merrill, 15, 207 Lillian Drive, won a $50 wardrobe from Mode -O-Day in the Campus Eggstravaganza Sweepstakes.

Miss Merrill won first prize by filling out an entry blank telling "what a million dollar look means to me".

The second place winner was Miss Susan Maxwell, 15, 810 Agnes. She received a blue stuffed "million dollar duck."

Owner of the Mode -O -Day is Mrs. Velva Parrish. Judges for the contest were Mary Lee Hailey and Mary Eaton.

Car Use Affects Students Grades

KANSAS CITY-- The more a student uses a car during the week, the poorer the student's grades will be, emphasized E. L. Stone, regional manager of an insurance company.

Referring to "A Teenage Pattern," an Allstate study of 20,000 high school students , Stone stated the major finding: Grades go down as driving privileges are extended.

"Parents are the only people who can supervise and enforce sensible use of the automobile during the academic year," he said.

Citing late statistics, he urged parents to exercise strict control over their children's driving.

"Parents simply must realize the importance of strict supervision of their children's driving habits," said Stone. "Young drivers have the highest crash and death rate of any age group on the road today." "The other important reason for parental control of young drivers is that their education will suffer if they are allowed too much use of a car."

He noted with concern late crash figures from the National Safety Council, which show that drivers in the 15-24 age group have a crash and death rate nearly double that of older drivers.

Young drivers under 24 have crashes at an annual rate of 41 per 100 drivers while drivers aged 40-65 have 18 collisions per 100 drivers.

"Many of these crashes could have been prevented if the drivers involved had been properly trained," said Stone. "Experience shows that trained young drivers have 50 per cent fewer crashes than untrained drivers of the same age."

But even if the young driver is well trained, studies must come before driving. A teenage pattern study showed that too much use of a car affects the grades of good students as well as poor student.

Grades start to suffer when the car is used more than two days out of five during the school week. Students who do not drive or who use the car only on weekends have the best grades, while those who drive two to four school days a week have significantly poorer grades, the survey proved.

Stone made these recommendations to parents interested in helping their children become good students and good drivers:

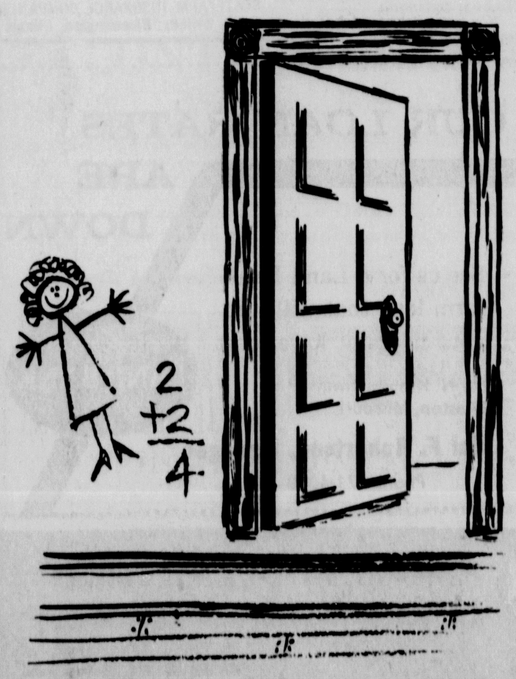

1. Make sure that scholarship comes first and driving second.
2. See that they get proper driver training in a high school.
3. Restrict the use of cars to weekends and keep the weekdays for school work. There will be exceptions, but this is a good basic approach.
4. Don't permit a teenager to have a part-time job just to pay for a car or to support one.
5. Keep the keys in your own pocket and lend the car only under proper circumstances.

It's up to the parents to keep cars and school work in their proper perspective and to provide the guidance and example in use of the car," the business leader added.

YOU CAN COUNT ON SMITH ALSOP PAINT

Because after all, it is washable. Sure the kids shouldn't write on the walls, or shouldn't leave their dirty handprints around the door frames or light switches; but, occasionally they do and it's reassuring to know that it will wash off. So you see not only can you count on Smith-Alsop paint, but you can also subtract.

Ann Landers

Propositions Many But Jobs Are Few

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a widow who moved to California from a Southern state. Yesterday I decided to take a stroll in the garden area where the ladies who live in this complex sit and visit. I was greeted warmly by five dowager types, three with blue hair and two with lavender. The two lavenders were somewhat silent. I introduced myself, we exchanged pleasantries, but I had the uncomfortable feeling that they were looking me over.

After about 15 minutes I rose to leave. One of the lavender-haired ladies smiled sweetly and said, "We have a few rules here. No one is allowed to talk about aches, pains, operations or illness." Before I could respond, she continued, "Also, we do not talk about politics, religion, clothing styles, inflation, Vietnam, our families, or our finances." It sounded as if she had memorized the list. I was stunned and did not reply. What do you think about such rules, Ann? I am completely mystified.--Newcomer.

Dear New: Looks like the only two subjects left open to the girls is sex and baseball scores. Try em and let me know how you make out.

Dear Ann Landers: This might not sound like an important problem to you, but it is driving me nuts. To put it in a few words–what can be done about people who have a lot of nerve and no common sense?

I sell auto license plates in Florida. People I hardly know ask me to get their plates so they won't have to stand in line. Last week three casual acquaintances came to my home with their money and registration blanks. One woman– a college graduate= –asked me to help her fill out the form. SHE COULDN'T UNDERSTAND IT!

This morning a distant relative showed up while I was having breakfast. I asked him why he didn't bring the stuff to the office. He said, "The parking around there is rough." What do you think about a jerk who wouldn't walk a few blocks but he thinks nothing of interrupting my breakfast?

Please print this. Everyone around here reads your column. Maybe if they see themselves they will take the hint and leave me alone next year. –Pain in the neck in Florida.

Dear Pain: Here it is, but don't bet the rent, Lady. The people with unlimited gall are invariably the most insensitive. If you want these clods to leave you alone you'll have to come right out and tell them so.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a very good secretary who happens to be "between engagements" at the moment. Things are not good in Detroit. I decided to run an ad in this newspaper under Situations Wanted Female. It occurred to me that if I framed something a little off-beat, I'd do better. This is the way my ad read: "Happiness is being a very good secretary, $150 a week."

I spent the last five days answering this crazy telephone. The men who are calling couldn't care less about my secretarial qualifications. They want to know my dimensions and would like to meet me for a drink. I have had seventeen propositions but not one legitimate job offer.

This has taught me a lesson I shall never forget. It doesn't pay to try to be cute when dealing with the public. This world is full of evil-minded creeps, lechers and dirty old men. Just sign me ---I'll Starve to Death First

Dear S.T.D.: So what's new?

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage--What to Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your news-paper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Wives Urged to Familiarize Selves With Family Finances

ST. LOUIS— A wife's ignorance of the family's financial situation can lead to serious complications in the event of her husband's death, according to James B. Porter, president of the Missouri Society of Certified Public Accountants.

He advises wives to look into arrangements made for their future, citing statistics showing that, on the average, women live five years longer than men; and also that most wives are younger than their husbands.

"These facts," Mr. Porter says, "support the point that a woman, likely to outlive her husband, should acquaint herself with family finances and prospects for survivors in the event of the breadwinner's death."

He poses some questions a wife can ask herself to test her knowledgability about a situation she is likely some day to face:

Should your husband die, where would you look for his will, stock certificates, insurance policies and other valuable papers?

Do you have a list of his holdings? What about employee benefits or pension plans at his place of employment? Would you be eligible for social security benefits?

In what banks does he have deposits? How would you gain access to safe deposit boxes?

Would the mortgage on your home have to be paid or is it covered by mortgage insurance?

Mr. Porter advises wives who can't answer such questions to ask their husbands for the information. His advice to men is that, while it is admirable to make adequate provision for one's family, it is imperative that the wife be informed of these arrangements. Otherwise, much of the benefit of the financial planning may be lost.

Risco Teachers Honored

RISCO — Kathryn Fortner, remedial reading teacher, and Amy Sexton, sixth grade teacher, have been selected leaders of elementary education for 1971, according to Jim Dortch, principal, of Risco elementary school.

Nominated earlier this year by the school's administrators, these educators were selected for this national honor because of their professional and civic achievements.

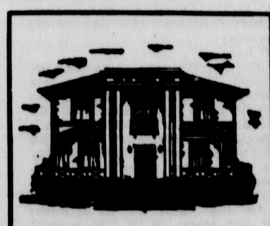

Leaders of American Elementary Education is an annual program. Biographies of those honored are featured in the awards volume, "Leaders of American Elementary Education."

Guidelines for selection include an educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, and civic service and professional recognition.

BLINKIN' BABIES

NEW YORK (AP) — An unborn baby blinks his eyes and moves his eyelids three months before birth, reports Dr. Alden N. Haffner, optometric consultant to the Society for Visual Care.

The society recommends thorough professional eye examinations for children when they are three years old.

Missouri Health Council Will Meet in Jefferson City

ST. LOUIS -- The Missouri Health Council, a voluntary group representing over thirty official and voluntary agencies from throughout the state will hold its annual meeting and conference at the Ramada Inn in Jefferson, City on September 17 with registration beginning at 9:00 a.m.

During the morning session, representatives of the Missouri Hospital Association will explain their Health Careers program, being carried on in the high schools of the state. They will take those in attendance back to the days when they were a Junior or Senior in high school, trying to decide what they should do with their life and lead them in the direction they should have gone.

Rod G. Gelatt, Assistant Professor of Journalism, University of Missouri will be the guest speaker at the luncheon hour. Newsman Gelatt will bring words of advice from his years of experience that will be of value to anyone in the health field.

In days of great health needs and various groups placing efforts in many fields of endeavor, the Missouri Health Council is fortunate to be able to bring together people from the Regional Office of the United States Department of Health Education and Welfare, the state office of Comprehensive Health Planning, the Mid -America comperhensive Health Planning Agency in Kansas City and the Northesast Missouri Comprehensive Health Planning Group of Kirksville to talk about the Missions, Goals and Objectives of Comprehensive Health Planning. This group was placed on the program in order that all might have a better understanding of federal, state and local health planning.

This meetin is open to anyone affiliated with a health agency or organization

Gridiron Predictions

By RON JAYNES

Another big gridiron season swings into action throughout Southeast Missouri tonight with 13 games scheduled.

As in previous seasons I'll try and give you an insight as to how the games will turn out. Even though we are a long way off at times, it's fun to try.

Before I call the winners in tonight's action, I'd like to invite all you 'gridiron ' fans who'd like to try your luck with us to send in your predictions for next week so they will reach us by Thursday morning.

Here goes —

Mayfield, Ky. at Sikeston -- The Cardinals aren't the team the Big Red has faced in years past, but with the experience they have to be favored ... But we'll stick our necks out and give the Dogs the edge ... SHS 17, Mayfield 14. Come on Dogs.

Charleston at Hayti -- This should be a real test for both clubs ... The Bluejays are favored by most, but don't count the Indians out ... CHS 21, Hayti 13.

Jackson at Dexter -- This traditional opener generally provides a few surprises ... The Bearcats are highly favored. DHS 35, Jackson 0.

Kennett at Malden -- Add number 27 ... Is about all we can say for the Indians in this battle ... 27 straight defeats for the Tribe ... Malden is loaded for the Indians ... Greenwave 42, Kennett 14.

Glendale at Poplar Bluff -- J. B. Hayes will take the Southeast Missouri individual scoring lead in this battle ... Let's say three touchdowns for the talented junior ... and PB 35, Glendale 13.

Caruthersville at Humbolt, Tenn. -- This is a tricky one for us... We know nothing about Humbolt ... but do know the Tigers are loaded ... We'll stick with our SEMO neighbors... CHS 21, Humbolt 14.

Valle at Chaffee -- I always get a couple of goodies like this one ... One team with Valle -- 28-13.

East Prairie at Scott City -- This should be a fairly well matched battle, but the Eagles depth will prevail. EPHS 21, I-SC 14.

St. Vincent at Portageville -- Coach Jim McKay's gridders have picked on one of the Lead Belts better clubs ... This should be interesting for both clubs ... How about St. Vincent by one -- 14-13.

Gideon at South Pemiscot -- The winner of this battle will take the lead in the Bootheel league race ... Gideon is our pick -- GHS 13, S. Pem. 6.

Delta C-7 at Doniphan -- The Chargers will surely win ... Its the Dons first varsity season ... but don't bet on it ... A close battle with C-7 losing... Don 20-14.

SHS At Disadvantage

Optimism, enthusiasm and determination were evident Thursday as the Sikeston high school Bulldog football team held a light workout in preparation for its season opener at Public School Stadium tonight against Mayfield, Ky.

The team is healthy and in high spirits as it heads into one of the school's toughest schedules, having Mayfield, Fairly high of Memphis and St. Louis Maplewood as opponents besides their always tough league rivals.

The 1971 Bulldogs follow the schools worst (1-8-0) record in history and have set their number one goal to erase that memory and claim the school's first league title since 1968.

Coach Bill Friday's crew will be at a disadvantage when they take the field tonight. Mayfield will be playing its third regular season game and fifth game including two scrimmages.

Mayfield chalked up its first victory of the season last Friday when it beat Caldwell Country, 21-13, after playing to a scoreless standoff with Owensboro in its season opener. In pre-season action the Cards beat Paris, Tenn. and Lost to Jackson, Tenn.

But the big Red come off a 9-1 season with outstanding personnel.

Included in that record was a 48-19 victory over the Bulldogs.

The Cardinals were one of the top offensive teams in Kentucky last season with an better than 48-point per-game mark.

Gone from that high scoring offensive machine is all-state and all-american quarterback Joe Ford. He will be heading the forces at Memphis State down the field.

David Fowler, the sure handed--fleet footed end of the Cards '70 corps, has moved to quarterback this season. The big Red is not rated in the Western Kentucky polls this season after having been among the top three last season. It is rated on adequate passing team but it stays on the ground mostly.

Sikeston high will go with two platoons tonight.

Bulldog Starting Assignments

Coach Priday expects Poplar Bluff to be the best team in the conference along with Cape Girardeau Central close behind and Perryville.

Venturi Gets Starting Call From Onofrio

KANSAS CITY (AP) The house of midnight strikes for five Big Eight Conference football teams Saturday and a sixth Saturday night

Nebraska, Missouri, Oklahoma State, Kansas and Kansas State raise the curtain on their 1971 campaigns, all against non-conferences foes, on their home fields. Colorado faces Louisiana State at Baton Rouge, La., under the lights.

Nebraska, the defending national champion and rated No.2 behind Notre Dame in the preseason poll, faces Oregon. The Missouri Tigers, playing under new head Coach Al Onofrio, are hosts to Stanford, the Rose Bowl champion. Oklahoma State loaded with sophomores, entertains Mississippi State.

The Kansas Jayhawks, hoping to make Don Fambrough's debut as head coach a rousing success, meet Washington State. Kansas State, a Big Eight Darkhorse, will meet Utah State.

The Oklahoma Sooners and the Iowa State Cyclones won't get into competition until Sept. 18 when the Sooners open against Southern Methodist and the Cyclones against Idaho.

Bob Devaney, the Nebraska coach, will dip into his pool of talented quarterbacks and tap Jerry Tagge to direct the Cornhuskers against the Ducks from the Pacific -8 Conference. If Tagge falters, senior Van Brownson, who alternated with Tagge last year, will take over. Nebraska will throw some fine runners against Oregon, including Jeff Kinney and Johnny Rodgers.

Devaney, irked at the Cornhuskers' recent practice sessions, says, "We have a long way to go. We have been disappointing on defense. The team running Oregon plays has been making for too much yardage.

"It may be that there is complacency amoung your people. They have received too much publicity. They need to make up."

Missouri will be the underdog in its test with Stanford. The Tigers are expected to be strong on defense and weak on offense. Onfrio has converted Mike Fink from defense to slot-back in an effort to bolster the offense.

John Venturi, a junior with little experience, will get the quarter- back nod over veterans Mike Farmer and Chuck Roper. Junior college transfer Don Johnson will play fullback. Sophomore Chuck Link will be the tailback, replacing injured Jack Bastable. "It's the best we've got to put in there," says Onofrio, "and I'm not worried about it."

Tony Pounds, last year's No. 2 passer in the Big Eight, apparently will start at quarterback for Oklahoma State over sophomore Brent Blackman. The Cowboys' offensive line is 22 pounds per man heavier than last year. Dickie Graham, an elusive split end, could prove the difference against Mississippi State;

"We threw a little more last year than we wanted to," Cowboy Coach Floyd Gass says; "We will do more running this season. We are young but we have more depth and size than a year ago."

Kansas has a king -sized problem, that of defense, a category in which the Jayhawks were the worst in the Big Eight in 1970. Fambrough's defense will get a fair test against Washington State since theCourgars have a potent offense. Kansas outscored the Cougars last year '48-31.

Dan Heck will do the Kansas quarterbacking. Steve Conley and Jerome Nelloms, both running backs, will try to take up the slack left by the graduation of John Riggins, the league's leading rusher in 1970.

Fambrough thinks Washington State is "50 per cent better than last year. I just hope they don't score on us that way this season. If they do, we're in trouble."

Dennis Morrision, with little varsity experience, will start at quarterback for Kansas State, whose great Lynn Dickey is no longer on the scene.

Coach Vince Gibson will take the wraps off of sophomore Isaac Jackson, a shy appearing halfback who as a high school junior was featured in a national television special entitled, "See Isaac Run."

"We've got a lot of players who haven't played a lot," Gibson noted. "We're not distitute. We've got some good footall players and the best young backs since I've been at Kansas State. We'll be a good, sound offensive team and pretty sound defensive and we'll be decent."

Hart No. 1

ST. LOUIS (AP) Jim Hart draws the quarterbacking job as the St. Louis Cardinals wind up their preseason National Football League campaign as hosts tonight to the Cleveland Browns.

The 27-year-old Hart, sorely challenged for the position through four previous exhibitions, won out by little more than an eyelash over 29-year-old Pete Beathard.

Hart has completed 33 of 63 passes for 477 yards and a touchdown, quarterbacking the Cardinals to a 16-14 edge over the Houston Oilers for their only preseason win.

Since then he's shared the duty with Beathard, for whom the Cards traded Charley Johnson to Houston in 1970. Beathard's chart is 29 to 57 in passing for 401 yards and three touchdowns.

"I'll take the responsibility for naming the starter and, if necessary, replacing him," said first-season St. Louis coach Bob Hollway, whose Cardinals are 1-2-1.

Hart called signals from start to finish of the Cards' 8-5-1 campaign last fall, with Beathard throwing but 17 passes.

"Both men have done a good job," Hollway said. "It's my judgement that Jim is the best man to start at this time."

The Browns' 30-year-old Bill Nelson will be the opposing quarterback, having directed Cleveland to a 30-7 triumph over the New York Giants last weekend.

Doubtful participants for Cleveland, however, are wide receiver Gary Collins and running back Bo Scott, both nursing bruised ribs. Tackle Dick Shafrath won't play because of injury.

Hollway has tabbed No. 2 draft choice Dan Dierdorf for a starting guard position and will give rookie defensive end Ron Yankowski a start because of injury to defensive tackle Bob Rowe.

The Cardinals and Browns, tabbed also-rans in the National and American conferences, respectively, have both lost close preseason games. Cleveland's record is 1-4.

A crowd of 45,000 is predicted for the 9:05, EDT kickoff.

Pre-Season Games

Two of the game's top quarterbacks, Joe Namath and Sonny Jurgensen, have been hurt in exhibition games but don't expect the National Football League to give up preseason contests.

It can't.

The owners can't afford to.

William Clay Ford, owner of the Detroit Lions, will attest to that.

Without exhibition games, "we wouldn't be in the black," says Ford.

Last weekend's exhibition games—the NFL officially likes to call them preseason games—were seen by 696,753. At $6, or thereabouts, for tickets, that comes to over $4 million. Multiply that by six—the number of preseason games most NFL teams play—and you see what Ford's talking about.

Ford also maintains that exhibition games are necessary for reasons other than money.

"Otherwise the coaches wouldn't play a rookie if their lives depended on it."

Battle got the ax Tuesday because rookies Chris Farasopoulos, a kick-return specialist, and Phil Wise, a safety, beat him out.

The 175-pound Battle was the Jets' punt and kickoff returns leader the past two seasons. He won his spurs in 1969 as a rookie, when, in an exhibition game, he returned a punt 86 yards for a touchdown against the New York Giants. It was the first meeting between the two New York clubs.

FOOTBALL PLAYOFF INFORMATION

The 1971 Football Playoff Manual was mailed to all football member schools in August. We ask that each school playing football check and make sure that they have received a copy of this Football Playoff Manual.

The district assignments for the 1971 football playoffs to be held in November, are listed in the back of the Football Playoff Manual. Assignments of schools to classes have been made on the basis of enrollment as follows:

Class	Enrollment
A	250 & under
AA	251-500
AAA	501-1200
AAAA	1201 & above

A minimum of seven games must be played by and including Sunday, November 14. The football data card provided must be filed postmarked immediately following the game played on or immediately before November 7. All schools playing 11-man football must file this card, which is needed to determine the ratings for all teams that qualify. Schools playing on November 14 are to send a telegram giving the results of their games. No games scheduled after September 1, 1971 may be considered in determining a school's ratings for the playoffs. However all games scheduled after this date should be reported to the MSHSAA Office.

One team will be selected from each district. (There will be different districts for different classes.) All games played through November 14 shall be used in determining a school's rating. Games played after that date will not affect a school's ranking in the selection for the playoff games.

A first division team is one that has won more than 50% of its games. For example, (5-4-0), (5-3-1), etc. A second division team is one that has won as many games as it has lost or has won more than it has lost, but has not won more than 50% of its games. For example, (4-2-3), (4-4-1), etc. A third division team is one which has won fewer games than it has lost. For example, (3-4-1), (2-3-4), etc.

	1st Division	2nd Division	3rd Division
Victory over	24	16	8
Tied with	12	8	4
Lost to	6	4	2

For a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a one higher classification add ½ point; for a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a one lower classification subtract ½ point.

For a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a two higher classification add one point; for a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a two lower classification subtract one point.

For a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a three higher classification add 1½ points; for a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a three lower classification subtract 1½ points.

A team's rating will be determined by dividing the total number of points earned from all games played through November 14 by the number of games played through that date. Teams will be selected from these ratings. If two or more teams finish with identical ratings and they have played each other, the winning team shall be ranked above the teams with identical ratings that it has defeated. If they played and tied each other, or they did not compete, then the representatives will be determined by totaling the wins and losses of their opponents and the one competing against the higher percentage of total wins will be selected. If the tie is not broken in this manner, the team whose opponents have earned the greatest number of rating points under the above shall be the higher ranking team.

If a tie is not broken under the steps above, it will be resolved by flipping a coin to determine the team to qualify.

The score of a game will not affect the number of points a team receives for a particular game. That is, a team winning 7-6 will receive the same number of points as it would by beating the same team 50-0.

WIDER GOAL POSTS AND SHORTER CLEATS MANDATORY FOR FOOTBALL THIS YEAR

The National Alliance Football Rules Committee adopted two rules changes at its January, 1969, rules meeting that will become mandatory for the first time during the 1971 football season. The first change requires that a goal post be widened so that the distance between the uprights above the crossbar is 23' 4". The other change prohibits the use of shoe cleats longer than ½". The rules committee recognized that both changes would involve expenses for the schools and thus included a provision in the rules that they would not become mandatory until the 1971 season.

The specifications for the goal post crossbar provides that it shall be 23' 4" long and 10' above the ground measured from the base of each upright to the top of the crossbar at its interception. If a single pedestal goal is used, measurements shall be made from each end of the crossbar perpendicular to the ground. If the goal has been altered by lengthening the crossbar and using the previous uprights, the height of the crossbar shall be measured from each end. The distance between the outside edges of the upright and the crossbar shall not exceed 24'. This permits use of an upright with a 4" diameter or width maximum. The uprights shall extend a minimum of 10' above the top of the crossbar.

Rule 1-5-3-d prohibits the use of cleats longer than ½". All shoe cleats worn during interscholastic game competition shall meet this criteria. There shall be no exceptions permitted. Research has indicated that the frequency and severity of knee and ankle injuries can be traced to the fact that because the foot is anchored to the ground through the use of the long cleat at the time of impact, injuries occur to the ankle and knee. Experiments prove that when shorter cleats are used, the foot can move and, as a consequence, injuries are reduced and/or they are less severe. Teams which have used shoes with shorter cleats relate there is no principle difference in the players ability to perform. A two year grace period has been provided for athletic goods manufacturers to have time to adapt to the requirement. It is important that coaches check all other game shoes to make sure that the cleats conform to the specifications in the rules book. Officials have been instructed to rigidly enforce this standard and to not permit a player to participate while wearing cleats that are longer than ½ inch.

Dodgers Win 4th Straight

"I figured they'd be looking for fast balls," Jim Palmer surmised. "That's why I kept going with my breaking pitches."

Baltimore's big right - hander was right — and his strategy paid off handsomely as he pitched out of a seventh inning jam, then went on to record a six - hitter for his 10th victory of the season with a 4-2 triumph over the Washington Senators Thursday night.

In the only other two games on the American League schedule, California edged Milwaukee 3-2 in 12 innings and Boston erupted for seven eighth - inning runs to wallop Detroit 12-6.

In the lone National League contest, Los Angeles won its fourth straight game and ninth in 11 with a 3-2 squeaker over San Diego.

The turning point for Palmer, who joined teammate Dave McNally as an 18-game winner — and Mike Cuellar of the Orioles tries to join them tonight — came after Tom McCraw of the Senators led off the seventh with a home run.

A walk, a single and a wild pitch put two runners in scoring position with one out and brought up the potential tying run by Frank Howard.

"With Palmer, I always have to look for fast balls," Howard recalled. "So he puts three curves over, right where he wants 'em.

"It was just a case of 'take a hike.' I couldn't have hit those hooks with two bats. That was the game right there."

Actually it wasn't right at that moment. It was a few minutes later, though, when Palmer also caught pinch - hitter Jeff Burroughs looking, also with a curve.

Palmer also scored a run for the Birds, singling to lead off the third inning and later coming in on Boog Powell's sacrifice fly.

The Angels, held hitless for seven innings by rookie Bill Parsons, tied the Brewers in the bottom of the ninth on a pair of walks and Mickey Rivers' triple.

And when rookie Floyd Weaver took over for Parsons in the 12th, Billy Parker ended it with a two - out homer, his first, over the centerfield fence.

Luis Aparicio drove in five runs for the Red Sox with three singles and his fourth home run of the year and Billy Conigliaro also homered for the winners while Dalton Jones had one for the Tigers.

Richie Allen's game - tying double triggered the Dodgers' three - run rally in the sixth inning against the Padres that gave Al Downing his 18th victory and boosted Los Angeles within 4½ games of idle San Francisco in the National League West.

...men Discuss Their Calling

Ministers Must Shoulder Myriad Burdens Of Others

THE REV. TOM BASS — "It took me six years to learn to say I don't know."

THE REV. J.W. GWIN -- "Problems are a way of life for everyone, including ministers."

By JUDY GAZETTE

"The role of the minister is not clearly defined," Don Glover, minister of Shady Acres Church of Christ, said, "but I think it's a combination of being Albert Einstein, Mickey Mantle, Billy Graham and a Boy Scout leader."

Glover and five other Sikeston ministers, questioned about the humanistic feelings and attitudes which they as clergymen experience — but are not always expected to experience — gave answers reflecting both sobriety and humor. None had doubts about his calling, but for different reasons.

The Rev. Joseph Wagner of First United Methodist Church was past 30 when he graduated from Eden Theological Seminary in St. Louis.

"I had always told my family," he said quietly, "that when I decided -- fully decided -- to enter the ministry, I was going to be sure. I taught school for about 10 years before I made my final decision and so you see, I'm fully committed."

The Rev. Wade Paris, Murray Lane Baptist Church, presented a contrast, for he was only 13 when he became conscious of a religious call.

"I say I've been a minister for 23 years," he explained, "although I've been a pastor for only 16 years. But when I was 13, I knew I was going to enter God's work. I thought at first I wanted to be a medical missionary, but in talking to missionaries, I learned that many times their medical duties take them almost entirely away from preaching and teaching, and I felt that preaching was what I needed to do."

The Rev. Tom Bass, pastor of Hunter Memorial First Presbyterian church, was a student at Louisiana Technical college, Ruston, when he reached a career decision, but prior to moving to Sikeston in February, he spent seven months away from the ministry.

"We were living in Cape Girardeau at the time," he said, "when I contrmplated going into another field for a time, but after working as an assistant construction engineer for those months, I got it out of my system."

Demands on a minister come in the form of 70-hour work weeks for some, including hospital visits, funerals, weddings, three sermons per week and counseling sessions, not to mention the fact that he is expected to remain in good spirits, good health and within ready reach by telephone.

For in an age of steadily rising divorce rates, costs of living and crimes, a stock piece of advice is to "see your clergyman." So where, aside from the obvious, does your clergyman go for a sympathetic ear of informal rap session?

How are he and his family affected by such demands?

The Rev. Mr. Wagner was a district superintendent years ago.

"I was sort of a pastor's pastor," he explained. "Extreme changes for a minister, such as moving from a large city to a rural area, can pose problems, just as in any other profession, and they need to be talked out. So, as a superintendent, I would counsel those under me -- listen to them. But for me, personally, aside from talking to God, I've found my wife to be the most wonderful listener. You know, it's as though the ministry were her calling, too."

"I think for most ministers," Glover said, "it's not easy to go to another person in the immediate area, like another minister, because we, like others, don't like for someone else to know our weaknesses.

"I have a distinct advantage because I have a brother who is a preacher and when we get together, we share and help each other with problems. My wife is also a very good sounding board, but I don't necessarily think my burdens are hers. I encourage her to be only as active as she wants to be personally because we have a large family.

"But personally, I don't think the ethical demands on a minister are any greater than on you as a newspaperwoman, for instance. You just have to be yourself. It's the only way to have any sanity."

"I go on my knees," the Rev. J. W. Gwin, West End Baptist church said. "The thing is, today, problems are a way of life. No one is without them. The idea is to understand just that and work around them. Take my children, for instance. I know that they make at least two adjustments a day -- major ones. Most people dress up to go out and when they come home, they relax. For my children, it's the other way around. Being a pastor's children, I think they feel they have to dress up to come home."

The Rev. Mr. Bass says that ministers are "geared for output. Others expect guidance from us and interpretation of their problems, but they don't, as a rule, expect us to need human type refreshment. We can sometimes get this sort of input from other clergymen or very close friends -- sometimes from professional seminars."

"I'll tell you, it took me six years to learn to say 'I don't know.' And when I did, it was like being liberated, because you're expected to know the answers to so many things -- even the unknown, sometimes.

"The nicest thing anyone ever does for me is treat me as a person. Everyone treats me as a human being, but it's one thing to be introduced as Rev. Tom Bass, and quite another to be introduced as 'my friend, Tom Bass.' The fact that I am a minister is incidental."

"It's unrealistic for a congregation to put their pastor on a pedestal," the Rev. Mr. Paris remarked. "of course that's the safest, most secure situation to be in for us, because people don't get to know you or your shortcomings, but you can't continue like that.

"I suppose," the Rev. Mr. Paris continued, "if there is some part I like to do least of all, I would have to say counseling, because many times people come to you too late and the sessions are unproductive. Of course, if you do even a little bit of good, it's worth ofit."

"There are usually two schools of thought about preachers," Joe Williams, minister of music and education at First Baptist Church and an ordained preacher, said. "one is that he should remain in the confines of the ecclesiastical order, away from worldly things, and the other is that as Christians, we are all preachers of the gospel and the pastor is no less human than anyone else.

"As for me, I feel that this is the only thing for me to do. Certainly, if we were to consider the amount of time spent in educational preparation and actual working hours, the financial benefits are not equitable with many non- secular jobs, but for us there is compensation money cannot in any way buy.

"I don't think I ever actually turn loose of the plow and look back, but there are times in attempting to do my work, when I look to be sure I've got hold of the right plow. I can do no other work."

A CONFIRMANT is immersed Sunday at the Church of God in Christ annual baptising in the Mississippi river at New Madrid.

Schweitzer Impact

World Warms to Reverence for Life

By REV. DAVID POLING

When Erica Anderson dedicated the Albert Schweitzer Friendship House in Great Barrington, Mass., last month, she invited a few friends to attend. Since her remodeled barn-film center can seat only a hundred people, she didn't bother to send announcements and only told "a few friends."

They must have told their friends, for 2,100 people showed up and the cars alone nearly filled a 20-acre pasture next to her house. Good news travels fast and events concerning Albert Schweitzer continue to be popular—and increasing.

After Schweitzer's death in 1965, Miss Anderson decided to establish a library, museum and film center. The result is a total success. For here is one of the best collections of books, manuscripts and printed material by and about Albert Schweitzer. Miss Anderson naturally shows her own films of Schweitzer, many not seen by the general public although her 1960 documentary film won the Academy Award for its category. Evidently, word has gotten around concerning this five-year project—more than 25,000 visitors have stopped off in Great Barrington during the construction period.

Schweitzer continues to attract a crowd. Was it his hospital in Africa, his music at Aspen, Colo., his lectures in Uppsala, Sweden, or his theology that shook Germany? It may be all these things, but one development, one aspect of his life and thought now reaches far beyond his lifetime, racing ahead of 20th-century man—Reverence for Life.

However notable Schweitzer was in other fields, however original or courageous, Reverence for Life is the enduring word and much of the world seems eager to discover the dimensions of such an idea.

Other happenings mark the impact of Schweitzer on our time.

- In East Germany, an anthology of Schweitzer's writings has just been published by a Marxist press. The early anti-imperialist, anti-colonialist stance of Schweitzer may be the reason for their interest.
- Robert Payne, author and lecturer on Schweitzer, has recently announced the possibility of a feature film. Other Hollywood producers, like William Graf (just completed "African Elephant") are actively considering film treatment of the Man from Lambarene.
- In Japan, Schweitzer runs a close second to Ghandi as the most popular non-Japanese author among schoolchildren. His world radio broadcasts in opposition to atomic bomb testing stirred the people of Japan. Reverence for Life is a powerful theme among Buddhists.
- Four countries have issued stamps commemorating Schweitzer's life and work. Gabon issued not only stamps but produced gold coins popular with collectors.
- In Gunsbach, Germany, Schweitzer's birthplace, a a new museum is sorting through his vast correspondence, establishing archives for scholars, students and interested followers of his work.
- Schweitzer posters and African scenes and "Friendship Cards" have been produced by Schweitzer World, Box 208, Pleasantville, N.Y. 10570, incorporating some of Erica Anderson's classic photography of the philosopher.

Q—In Christian symbolism, how are the Gospel writers represented?

A—The winged man is Saint Matthew, the winged lion is Saint Mark, the winged ox is Saint Luke and the eagle is Saint John.

Revival services began Wednesday night and will continue each night at 7:30 p.m. through Sept. 19 at Christ Gospel Church, 717 Kendall St., under the leadership of Evangelists Johnny and Tressie Goetz, formerly of Sikeston, and Pastor Jerry Bachelder.

The Rev. Mr. Goetz is a graduate of Kelly high school of Benton and Mrs. Goetz is a graduate of Sikeston high school. Both are graduates of the Christ Gospel Bible Institute in Jeffersonville, Ind.

Before entering full - time evangelism, the Rev. Mr. Goetz pastored for three years in Evansville, Ind.

During the revival period, the Rev. Sister B.R. Hicks of Jeffersonville, Ind., founder and director of Christ Gospel Churches International, will join the Rev. Mr. Goetz for a two - day convention here Wednesday and Thursday.

Evening Course Offered

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Baptist Student Center is offering a free, non - credit evening course in The Life of Christ this fall to lay church leaders and pastors who desire training for more effective service.

The first class session will meet Thursday, Sept. 16, at 7 p.m. Students may enroll at that time. Classes will meet each Thursday evening of the first semester from 7 until 9 p.m. The course will be taught by Dr. Thomas S. Messer, professor of the chair of Bible.

Students are encouraged to bring their own New Testaments in their favorite translation. Textbooks will be available for those who wish to purchase them.

Teen Challenge Worker First Assembly Speaker

Speaking in the 7 p.m. service Sunday at First Assembly of God Church, 306 South Kingshighway, will be Steven Bursey, field representative for the Mid-America Teen Challenge Center in Cape Girardeau.

Along with Bursey, several boys from the training center will attend the service as guests, according to the Rev. T. A. McDonough, pastor. The center seeks to help and rehabilitate teenagers with drug problems.

Bursey was born and reared in New York City. His parents were working middle class Jews. In junior high school he started smoking marijuana. A few months later he was introduced to the drug heroin. After that his life was one of crime, jails, hospitals, and addiction.

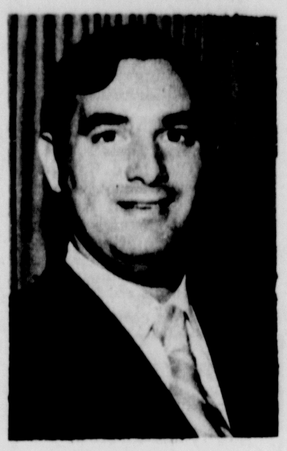

A family doctor told Bursey that the only way out was to put a gun to his head and pull the trigger. Then one day he heard about a place called Teen Challenge, a drug rehabilitation center in Brooklyn. He went there to please his mother and satisfy his own curiosity.

There he was confronted by Don Wilkerson, the brother of David Wilkerson, author of "The Cross and the Switchblade" and founder of Teen Challenge.

Bursey was surprised when they opened a Bible and started talking about God and faith.

After a few days there he stole money and left. Under the influence of heroin that night Steve began to think about all the places he had been and all the things he had tried to get off drugs.

He went back to Teen Challenge and found help through his faith in Christ, and now has completed Central Bible college, Springfield, with a bachelor of arts in Bible.

Steve Bursey

Q—In religious art, what does the crown and scepter signify?

Ministerial Alliance Sponsors Film Showing

BELL CITY -- The Bell City Ministerial Alliance is sponsoring the film presentation of 'his Land' on Thursday, Sept. 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Bell City High School auditorium.

Widely shown and well received in area churches, the movie is a thrilling account of the story of Israel from ancient to modern times. The hour - long color film features Cliff Barrows and Cliff Richard, popular English singing star.

The POWER of FAITH

BY WOODI ISHMAEL

"On Earth join all ye creatures to extol Him first, Him last, Him midst, and without end." Paradise Lost, Book 5.

John Milton spent his life extolling God in his poetry, prose and actions. He was undoubtedly the most devout of all the great English poets.

His parents wanted him to become a clergyman but his brilliant mind led into the field of writing. He was devoted to Puritanism and Oliver Cromwell, and with his pen he attacked their enemies in his many pamphlets on the subject. When Cromwell, leader of the Puritans, formed the Commonwealth in 1649 Milton held a secretarial post in the government. When Cromwell died in 1658 Milton narrowly escaped being executed as a supporter of the Puritans. His fame as a poet probably saved him.

In later life Milton went blind but continued to write some of his greatest poems, including "Paradise Lost." He was a deeply spiritual man. He studied the Bible intensely and based his faith upon the word of the Bible. He believed that the Bible was the cornerstone of faith and that all should know it well.

THE CHRISTIAN & WAR

This week's Uniform INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
By Dr. William H. Taft

Scriptures:
Exodus 33 12-23: Job 11 7-9; 37:23-24; Isaiah 40: 18-26 Romans 11: 33-36

GOD TRANSCENDS OUR UNDERSTANDING

Based on outlines prepared by the Department of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., and used by permission.)

Our first lesson in this series about God makes it clear that we cannot escape questions about Him.

As Jean Jacque Rousseau once said, "If there wasn't a God, we would have to invent one to keep people sane." "Frequently the more one studies such a question the more questions he raises.

What are our priorities in our daily thoughts? What ideas have occupied our thinking for the past week? Some think of their families, their children, their household problems, their jobs.

Others think of the world's difficulties, the wars, the prisoners held by the enemy, the economic and political controversies.

How many place God on their list? How many of these daily problems will ever be solved without God's help.

Our lesson recognizes that "human minds cannot take all of God into their understanding." Still we seek significant incidents to restore and build our faith.

Moses followed God's instructions while he continually wanted to know about Him. When Moses asked God to show him His glory, he was told, "My face you cannot see, for no mortal man may see me and live."

Why didn't God want to show His face? Some believe it was man's lack of capacity in his human state to fully comprehend God.

For example, how does one picture God in his own mind? Some see him as white, some as black, some as old, some as ageless. To some He is a celestial Santa Claus. Most of us cannot create an image of Him in our minds.

Isaiah raised a similar question when he asked, "What likeness will you find for God or what form to resemble His? Again, we are told that "He stretches out the skies like a curtain, He spreads them out like a tent to live in,"

In the New Testament it is "Who knows the mind of the Lord?" No one can fathom the mystery of God, Job tells us. Paul thought His wisdom, knowledge and judgement beyond the powers of anyone to understand.

One can spend an eternity seeking to know about God. Today, probably more than ever before, people are seeking God in nature.

In many passages form the Bible we learn of God's concern for the flowers and the animals. And through these elements we better comprehend Him.

The Koran of Islam says "If all the trees on earth were pens and if there were seven oceans full of ink, they could not suffice to describe the wonders of the Almighty."

Where do you find God? Some find him in outerspace, others find HIm in the privacy of their own surroundings. Some, unfortunately, never find Him.

Probably our title for this lesson presents an impossible solution. He is beyond the world yet He is in this world; He is beyond our understaning and comprehension, yet we never cease to want to learn more about Him.

Governors Have Money on Mind

By Editorial Research Reports

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — The 63rd annual National Governors Conference opens Thursday in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

A few of the nation's 50 governors may go to their annual conference wondering why they ever asked for the job in the first place. To be a governor, they will probably mutter, is to get it from all sides.

The four - day conference in San Juan will give them a brief but lavish opportunity to get away from the state house crunch. Formal dinners, garden buffet lunches and a cello concert by Pablo Casals may help convience some of them that the job has a few redeeming perquisites.

Sixteen of the governors are new this year, reflecting the voter discontent that swept seven incumbents out of office in the 1970 elections. All seven defeated incumbents were Republicans, helping the Democrats to control 29 statehouses in 1971, compared with only 18 a year ago.

It hasn't taken the new governors long to learn the basic fact of gubernatorial life: there isn't enough money to go around. The recession has made taxpayers more reluctant than usual to finance statewide social programs. But it hasn't reduced demands for those services, especially from cash - starved cities. Some governors are having to choose between a passive administration with curtailed services at low cost and an activist administration financed over the objections of taxpayers and politicians alike.

In Pennsylvania, Democrat Milton J. Shapp took office this January following a campaign in which he promised to combine a state income tax with relief for low - income citizens. After two months of haggling, the legislature passed a bill in March establishing a 3.5 per cent tax with exemptions for many of the poor.

But the state supreme court ruled the plan unconstitutional, insisting it violated a requirement of uniformity. Shapp had to start all over again, and it was Aug. 28 before the legislature approved a flat rate 2.3 per cent personal income tax, narrowly averting bankruptcy.

Ohio's John J. Gilligan, also a freshman Democrat, campaigned for governor by promising to depart from the previous administration's tight - fisted approach that kept the state 45th in taxes per capita. The Republican legislature looked unfavorably on Gilligan's plans for corporate and personal income taxes to finance new spending. By late August the final tax and budget package still had not reached the governor's desk, and Gilligan had threatened to lay off 3,000 state employees.

Other freshman governors have had similar problems. Connecticut's Thomas J. Meskill (R) vetoed an unpopular state income tax, then approved a less lucrative sales tax boost and cut state services by nearly $100 million to balance the budget. Florida's Reubin Askew (D) persuaded the legislature to place a corporate profits tax question on the November ballot, and is touring the state to drum up support.

The program of the Puerto Rico conference will stray far from tax matters to include topics like health care, penal reform, and no- fault auto insurance. But odds are that most of the nation.s governors will have money on the mind, especially President Nixon's decision to postpone revenue sharing with the states.

Malta And Iceland Wave Big Sticks

By Editorial Research Reports

LONDON-- Malta and Iceland are two tight little islands that are going all out to annoy the NATO alliance. No one knows how seriously to take the ultimatums and brinksmanship of their newly elected left-wing governments. However, if they stick to their guns, the United States may have to quit the Keflavik air base in Iceland. And Britain would have to find new ports of call for its ships and planes in the Mediterranean.

Iceland is by far the most important of the two bases. The Economist calls it the "turnstile of the North Atlantic." From Keflavik, the United States keeps track of Soviet fleet and aircraft movements on the Kola Peninsula and in the Arctic Ocean. Elections in Iceland last June ended a 12-year period of relative political stability. The new colition government announced on July 15 that it wanted to renegotiate Iceland's 1951 defense agreement with the United States.

When the flamboyant Dominic Mintoff became Prime Minister of Malta on June 16, with only a one-man majority in the new Parliament, he said that the defense agreement between Britain and Malta was "no longer in being." Mintoff also set his sights on evicting a NATO naval headquarters on the island. On Aug. 20 it was announced that the NATO facility will be moved to the bigger NATO headquarters in Naples. Meanwhile, Mintoff continues to negotiate with the British for a higher payment for continued presense of a British air base and harbor rights.

Malta's Mintoff, who is an Oxford graduate, tried 16 years ago as prime minister of the then colony of Malta to integrate the islands into the United Kingdom. The British were immensely relieved when he gave them a way out by settling for financial aid. Subsequently Mintoff tried to obtain NATO membership,then associate status, and finally the status of "an observer" -- only to be turned down each time.

As the Economist observed, NATO wanted a presence on Malta primarily to keep the Russian air and naval forces out. However, "they would rather lump it than pay a grossly excessive amount of money for a base of only marginal value." Although the Russian Ambassador, Mikhail Smirnovsky, has been courting Mintoff, the Kremlin does not feel it owes the Maltese a living.

The traditionally warm Anglo-Maltese relationship has floundered on Mintoff's demands. If Britain pulled out, 9,000 Maltese would immediatley lose their jobs and Mintoff could lose his majority. British Defense Minister, Lord Carrington, said after visiting Malta that, "This is not a matter of life and death. But I think both countries would be the loser and I think Malta would be a bigger loser."

Iceland, unlike Malta, does not want cash. Instead, it appears ready to defer the question of bases to the dispute over fishing waters. However, the two Communists in the cabinet object to the presence of 3,700 American troops. In view of the fact that Iceland has no armed forces, her only contribution to NATO defense over the past two decades has been her tolerance of the presence of American troops.

Iceland's defense treaty with the United States in 1951 allowed six months notice of withdrawal to be given by either side and then a further 12 months before the actual withdrawal had to take place. During the last cirsis, in 1956, negotiations over the base were allowed to drag on until the Soviet invasion of Hungary changed public opinion in Reykjavik. The hope is that something will happen to divert the Icelandic cabinet from its course. In the meantime, of course, the mice will roar.

The committee will hold its first meeting with the state library commission Sept. 21.

1,819 Enrolll At Malden

MALDEN — Malden R-1 Schools showed a total enrollment of 1,819 students at the end of the first week of the 1971-72 school term. The figure does not include the 160 students enrolled in the Tri - County Trade School, of which 59 of the students are Malden residents.

There are 14 grades (or classes) within the three divisions of the Malden R-1 Schools, ranging from Kindergarten to the 12th Grade. The 6th Grade has the highest enrollment with 181 students; and the Special Education Class is the smallest with a total of 19 students.

The enrollment by grades is:

Kindergarten, 137; Special Education, 19; 1st Grade, 136; 2nd Grade, 170; 3rd Grade, 125; 4th Grade, 134; 5th Grade, 149; 6th Grade, 181; 7th Grade, 122; 8th Grade, 142; 9th Grade, 144; 10th Grade, 138; 11th, 12th Grades, 111 each.

New School Busses Will Ease Crowding

A transportation problem that plagued the opening session of the public schools may be near an end according to Superintendent of Schools Sam Harbin.

Harbin said this morning that route problems and overcrowding existed in initial busing. But the bulk of the problems have been "worked out".

The problems centered around rural busing routes, where students remained on buses for extended periods because of a bus ahortage. Some of the city buses also were overcrowded, Harbin said.

Four new buses, scheduled to arrive in late November, will eliminate most of the problems, Harbin said. The new vehicles will include two 72-passenger buses, one conventional bus, and a 12 passenger carryall. The carryall is earmarked for transportation to school activities.

When the new buses arrive, Harbin said, one existing bus will be used for "stand-by purposes."

An new air conditioning unit at Lee Hunter elementary school should be in operation within the month. Matthews elementary junior high, Morehouse, and kindergarten do not have air conditioning.

Fraudulent Calls Will Be Investigated

New procedures to bring fast detection and follow up of fraudulent long distance calls will protect telephone customers who ultimately pay the bill, according to Mark Rudloff, Southwestern Bell manager.

"There is no such thing as a free long distance call," Rudloff said. "All states have laws against fraudulent telephone calls and we are joining other Bell System companies in a drive to deter abuse of long distance service."

Rudloff said that the new process minimizes delay between the time the call is made and discovery of fraud.

"For example, if a person makes a call using a non-existent credit card number we are able to spot it through daily processing of long distance message tickets which operators fill out on each call," he said.

"When such a fraud is discovered," Rudloff said, "a member of the company's security organization will personally visit the recipient of the call to gain informaiton about the offender for possible court action."

The systemwide effort is expected to stem the tide of growing revenue losses from fraudulent use of the service.

"Across the country," Rudloff said, "underground groups, petty cheaters and large illegal operators are adding to the $34 million that the Bell System estimates it may lose this year from toll fraud. That's up from $8 million in 1968."

"We are obligated to our customers and to the communities we serve to prosecute those who attempt this type of criminal activity," he said. "Increased revenues accounted for as a result of savings on our fraud losses can be better used to improve telephone service."

Van Gogh Letters Reveal Torment

VAN GOGH'S "DIARY": The Artist's Life in His Own Words and Art. Edited by Jan Hulsker. William Morrow. $12.50.

This is a "diary" in the sense that it reconstructs Van Gogh's own written thoughts during the period that he was an artist, from 1881 to 1890.

There are excerpts from the hundreds of letters that Van Gogh wrote to his younger brother Theo (who periodically gave him enough money to live on), his parents and some of his artist friends.

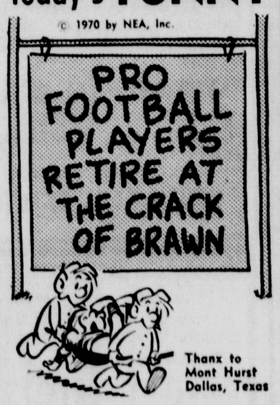

In addition it is evident that many of the artist's drawings. watercolors and paintings reflect his reactions to the places and people around him, and the illustrations are keyed to his running comment on his works in progress.

At the back of the book is a biographical summary about Van Gogh's years before 1881, when at the age of 27 he began his career as an artist. Some readers may want to absorb this background before reading the main text. There are 19 color plates and 260 illustrations in black and white.

From these Van Gogh letters come many intimate expressions of the artist's tortured battle to create his own view of the world; his disappointment over the fact his works did not sell (in the past two years two of his paintings have been auctioned for $1.3 million and $1.2 million); his emotional, physical and mental problems, which led to his early death, and his sometimes desperate attempts to live up to the esthetic goals in which he believed. This book should serve as a companion volume to whatever biographical or critical studies the reader may want to consult.

Hannibal, a Carthaginian general, led an army against the Romans in 218 B.C. He successfully marched his army, including about 40 elephants, from Africa across the Alps, The World Almanac says. Hannibal reached Rome after 16 years of fighting but was called home after Publius Scipio invaded Carthage. Reluctantly Hannibal left Italy and was defeated by Scipio at Zama.

Girl Is A Karate Star

By THOMAS P. MILLER
Reading Eagle Staff Writer

READING, Pa. (AP)– In these liberated 70s it is no surprise to find a girl like Kim Fritz with two four-foot-high trophies and over 40 other awards, for — of all things — her karate talents.

In fact Kim, a recent high school graduate, is the No. 1 karate competitor in the United States, and she only began studying karate two years ago. She wanted a little knowledge of self-defense, but found she loved it.

Her first competition came after three months of training. At first she hesitated to compete in the rough New York International because she was afraid of getting hurt. She does not hesitate to say, "I don't like pain."

Her efforts resulted in her taking second place in kata, which is the competition for form, and fourth place in free-sparring. Since that first foray into karate contests, she has amassed 45 trophies. She holds a first degree brown belt, too.

In this "age of the body," as Kim puts it, karate develops a tremendous amount of mental as well as physical awareness and discipline. Balance and mind-over-matter are the keys to the exercises that teach the student to strike with full body weight.

The remarkable thing is that there is no physical contact in karate. "It takes quite a bit of self-control to pull a punch three inches from someone's nose, or kick past an ear, disturbing only a few hairs," Kim remarked.

Karate is as much a state of mind as of physical strength, she pointed out. Related to Eastern mysticism, karate demands that the karate ka, the term for a student of the art, be mentally conditioned not to feel pain.

Kim also explains that women usually pick up karate faster than men, since men have to unlearn so many fighting techniques which are not acceptable in karate. Women are usually in better physical shape too, since they keep themselves physically active doing housework.

Kim reports women enjoy the karate exercises, not only because they are slimming, but also because they are similar to ballet exercises and produce grace and coordination.

Q—Why are modern interviews and discussions called "rap sessions"?

A—The expression stems from the French phrase "en rapport," meaning "in harmony with."

Q—In landscape gardening, what is the difference between bonsai and topiary?

A—Bonsai is the art of dwarfing trees so they are identical with larger ones except in size; topiary is the art of tree sculpturing.

Q—Which is the most intelligent bird?

A—Many scientists rate the crow as the cleverest bird. Scarecrows seldom fool the crow, a cunning corn stealer.

Q—For what is the Sullivan Memorial Trophy awarded?

A—It is awarded annually to the amateur athlete who, by his or her example, has done the most during the year to advance the cause of sportsmanship.

Q—Does the United States still issue $2 bills?

A—Issuance of $2 bills has been discontinued because of a lack of public interest.

Q—Are there any original manuscripts of the New Testament extant?

A—The authors of the original books of the New Testament wrote them on papyrus scrolls, none of which now exist.

What's the Law

Wife Is Sight to See

BY JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Horace discovered the hard way that beauty is only skin deep. After courting Verna for several months, he popped the question and they got married. While she had been a vision to behold, after the marriage she was a sight to see.

She doggedly refused to use makeup or to go to a beauty parlor. In fact, Horace soon became convinced that even a little gunpowder on her face could make an improvement. All his pleadings, however, proved to no avail. He finally sued to end his marriage on the grounds of cruelty.

"I just can't take it any more," he told the judge. "My wife's appearance scares me half to death and she won't do anything about it. I see her in my nightmares and find that I'm not even asleep." "I am what I am," answered his wife, "and I won't be painted over. I don't like it, he can lump it. He didn't marry a Kewpie Doll."

If you were the Judge, would you free Horace from his unpainted wife?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that a wife's refusal to use cosmetics or to go to a beauty parlor does not constitute cruelty so as to warrant the termination of a marriage. (Based upon a 1951 Washington Supreme Court Decision)

Susan Holiman Miss Gideon

GIDEON — Miss Susan Holiman was named "Miss Gideon of 1971" Friday night to climax the annual beauty pageant held at the high school cafeteria. The event was sponsored by the Gideon American Legion and Legion Auxiliary.

Miss Holiman, a senior, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holiman. She was presented a bouquet of roses and a trophy, and received her crown from Miss Diane Werner, "Miss Gideon of 1970." Miss Werner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Werner.

Miss Pattie Windham was named first alternate to the winner. A senior, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Windham, and was presented a trophy.

Miss Susan Ashlock, a junior, was selected as the second alternate. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charley Ashlock, and she also received a trophy.

Miss Carol Adams was awarded the coveted "Miss Personality" trophy. She is a senior and is the daughter of Mrs. Kathryn Adams.

Pemiscot Hospital Buys Nuclear Scanner

CARUTHERSVILLE — An advanced diagnostic machine, the Picker Nuclear Magnascanner 500, was recently received at the Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital. The $30,000 machine is being bought on a lease - purchase arrangement. It will do advanced and sophisticated diagnostic work which has not been done in the hospital before.

"Some of its uses will be to find tumors, most thyroid problems, abnormal blood flow, such as blood clots in the lungs, determine total body blood volume, find intra - cranial hemorrage, detect abnormal fat absorption, and the localization of Placental, plus numerous other uses," said Dr. Phil Cheatham, the hospital's Radiologist. Dr. Cheatham works at the hospital three days a week and spends the rest of his time in Memphis.

Before the machine may be used the facility and the radiologist must be licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission. The license has been applied for and is expected to be received in the hospital shortly. To be approved to use the machine the Radiologist must be a doctor, and he must be supervised for at least 40 hours in its use. Dr. Cheatham recently completed his 40 hours training at Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Technicians who will use the machine must be trained and then will work under the supervision of the Radiologist. Ed Woody has completed two weeks on-the-job training in the scanner's use at Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston. Two other technicians will be trained for the machine.

The reason the Atomic Energy Commission is so interested in the machine is that it uses radio active isotopes. The isotopes will not be stored in the hospital at this time as hospital officials have no idea how much the machine will be used. The isotopes lose their "punch" after a short time and as they are rather expensive. Doses will be ordered as they are needed. If an order is placed for a dose before 10 a.m. it will arrive in the hospital the next day, so no problem is expected in the supply. The A.E.C. will supervise the use of the isotopes for safety reasons.

The scanner works basically this way; a particular chemical is given to a patient, either orally or with a shot, and that chemical will locate in the region of the body to be examined. The scanner will then move back and forth above the area, picking up the chemical in the body. A detailed picture of the organ, such as the thyroid, is then produced by the machine. The scanner is different from the X-Ray in that the X-Ray works without the use of the chemicals. It is also not able to go into the body to find problems the way the scanner can.

The scanner will even be able to tell the doctor if an organ is functioning, and to what extent. "We are in the forefront of medical diagnosis with this machine," Dr. Cheatham told The Pemiscot Journal. "We are the only hospital between here and Memphis to have one."

Dr. Cheatham expects the machine to be used as many as ten times a day when area doctoes become familiar with its possibilities. The estimated maximum use of the machine was 30 a month.

Hospital Administrator Jack Tipton said "Before buying this expensive piece of equipment we took into consideration the fact that this machine might not pay for itself, but the board decided that even if one patient's life were saved the machine would pay for itself. Really, can anyone say what a persons life is worth?"

He went on to point out that even though the population of the county is declining the hospital can't allow that fact to dictate whether or not to continue improving health services. "We have an obligation to our patients to provide the best possible service, and that's what we are tryin to do," Tipton continued.

Out of county doctors may refer their patients to the Pemiscot Hospital for diagnosis on the machine. This would help pay for it.

When asked how long the machine would stay usable, not being replaced by something newer or better, Dr. Cheatham pointed out that he expected nothing better to come out within the next eight years. As the machine is improved in the future, however, separate components can be replaced with improved ones, thus keeping the machine at peak ability.

Another new piece of equipment bought recently was a Coulter Counter which counts both red and white blood cells faster and more accurately than humans can do it. To test blood samples now takes about 30 seconds on the new machine while it would take five to seven minutes when done by hand. The tests have been made under a microscope with the technicians counting the cells.

The Coulter Counter cost the hospital $6,800 but will save its cost in a short time sent to the point that the machine had to be bought or another technician put on the staff. The salary the machine will save, will pay its own cost.

Four hundred to four hundred and fifty blood tests are made each month.

attorneys and set the trial date for Dec. 7.

Prosecutor Tom Gilmore said following Kirk's arrest the day after the murder that the death penalty may be asked.

In other circuit court action Leroy Todd of East St. Louis entered a plea of guilty to an auto theft charge. The matter was referred to the probation and parole board for presentencing investigation.

Todd is charged with stealing a pick-up truck from Robert Lassater July 8. He remains in custody in the Scott county jail in Benton.

A guilty plea to burglary and stealing entered by Byron Klingel of Sikeston was referred to the board for presentencing investigation.

Klingel is charged with two other youths of the July 29 burglar of $50 from Tidwell's Gulf Station on North Main. He was freed on bond last week.

Daniel L. Suggs of Sikeston filed an application in circuit court to set aside the revocation of his driver's license. The license had been revoked according to Suggs, when he refused to take a breathalyzer test and was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Judge Craig heard testimony from Sikeston Police Sgt. Leonard Campbell and from Suggs and then denied the motion to reinstate the revoked license.

A burglary and stealing charge against Chester Lee Swinney of Sikeston drew an innocent plea. Craig set the trial date for Nov. 3.

Swinney is charged with stealing checks and a check maker from Jarvis Motor Company in Sikeston in July. He is free on bond.

Burial will be in the Sunset of Memories cemetery in Sikeston.

POLLY'S POINTERS

How Does One Hang Horseshoes Above Door?

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—We have some horseshoes we would like to use in some way but do not know the legend as to the way they should be set above a door or other ways to bring one good luck.—MARGARET

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve concerns household products that come in glass containers that so often have a label wrapped around that almost completely obscures the contents. Whether it is vinegar, medicine or shampoo, I like to check the contents now and then to know when to order more. Why can't such labels be put only halfway or three-quarters of the way around such glass containers?—LINDA

DEAR POLLY—I have help for Mrs. A. C. S., who wants to remove or disguise a small three-letter monogram on her son's gray shirt that is a hand-me-down. Add more embroidery so as to include the present monogram in an embroidered cartoon character, a ball or bat or some symbol he would like.—MRS. S. A. S.

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. A. C. S. could remove the embroidered initials from her son's shirt by putting the material over her knee (wrong side up) and firmly holding it down on both sides with one hand. With the other hand, take a razor blade and lay down flat side against the material and go back and forth in a cutting motion all the way across the lettering, being sure to cut the threads as she goes. Turn material over and pick out the remaining threads with a pin. I did this to my husband's Navy uniform and it worked fine.—KATHY

DEAR GIRLS—If you use a pin to lift the threads to be cut with a razor blade, there is less danger of making a cut in the fabric. I prefer using manicure scissors for such a job.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Like Mrs. A. C. S., I was also given some expensive initialed shirts for my son. I cut a piece from the tail of the shirt to make a pocket that I sewed right over the initials as they were on the left side of the front. Perhaps her son has the insignia of some club he belongs to and that could be sewn over the monogram. —MOLLY

Ichord Speaks At Jamboree

More than 175 delegates from throughout the state attended a closed session at the Flaming Pit yesterday afternoon and the jamboree followed at the Town Plaza Shopping Center.

Officials of the jamboree expected more than 1,000 delegates to attend the jamboree but less than 300 came.

Abram Hirschowitz, attending the jamboree as a delegate, discussed the possibility of establishing nursing homes in Southeast Missouri through the use of Social Security funds.

Hirschowitz said this morning that his proposal calls for using Social Security funds to finance the lodging of the residents of the nursing homes and added the venture would be a combination of county, state, and federal funds.

Each resident of the nursing home would pay a set amount from a Social Security check each month to cover the cost of their lodging and expenses.

He said the proposal would be a model project and added that it should be "Kicked -off" in the Bootheel.

Other delegates, according to Hirschowitz, agreed to discuss the proposal but no action has been taken.

Kirkpatrick Bars Security Firm

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick said Thursday he has issued an order barring Investors Security Corp., a Minnesota firm, its Missouri corporation and its officers from doing business in Missouri.

Investors security has offices in Minneapolis and St. Louis Park, Minn. It has been doing business in Missouri as the I.S. Corp. of Kansas City. Lowell D. Condon and Rufus G. Helm are listed by the secretary of state as the lone officers, directors and stockholders.

Kirkpatrick said the firms have advertised securities for sale in Missouri without having been registered under the Uniform Securities Act.

He said a Minnesota district court has issued a permanent injunction against the Minnesota firm, barring it from engaging in security sales in that state.

ERNEST PERKINS

Ernest Perkins, the new seventh grade teacher from Exeter, New Hampshire, graduated from Southeast Missouri State College in 1970. While attending college, summers were spent working at a lobster pound in Seabrook, New Hampshire, enabling him to pay all of his college expenses at SEMO.

Mr. Perkins at present has no definite opinion of the Oran School, but agrees that the people are friendly, which is a quality of most residents in Southeast Missouri.

Being a first year teacher, he was not able to define any advantages or disadvantages about the school system as yet, but states his foremost reason for choosing junior high si that he believes this age group has more enthusium and less inhibitions than nay others.

Mr. Perkins and his wife reside in Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

Labor Wants Profit Limit After Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFLCIO President George Meany said today organized labor will insist that profits be included by President Nixon in any new economic restraints imposed after the wage-price freeze.

"This is the condition we've laid down for labor cooperation," Meany said in a television interview shortly before he and other labor chiefs were to meet with Nixon at the White House

"The idea that profits are too low depends on what books you use," Meany said on the NBC's Today show.

He said he and other labor leaders meeting with Nixon will a tinsist that workers get back pay for wage hikes held up during the 90-day freeze.

He said labor will fight Nixon's proposed business investment tax credit in Congress because "we have no evidence that the investment tax credit will create a single job."

The labor chiefs summoned to the meeting by Nixon are among some of the bitterest critics of his economic program. A principal concern of the leaders is what should follow the 90-day wage-price freeze.

"He'll be listening," Secretary of Labor J. D. Hodgson told United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock of Nixon's attitude toward this first meeting with union chiefs since the freeze began Aug. 15.

"I don't think they are going to call us in and say 'you write the ticket," Woodcock said in an interview.

But he added that Labor Department officials told him the administration hasn't closed its mind to one of labor's biggest demands—retroactive pay for all negotiated wage hikes held up by the freeze, and all scheduled wage hikes due later under current contracts.

"The whole question is open," Woodcock said after the meeting with Hodgson and Asst. Secretary of Labor W. J. Usery. The Auto Workers have threatened to cancel contracts covering some 600,000 workers with major auto firms if they don't get pay hikes due in November and December.

The issue of recovering frozen pay hikes is also vital to several other leaders invited by Nixon — United steelworkers President I. W. Abel who won 30 per cent in wage hikes over three years for some 350,000 steelworkers last month, and President Joseph A. Beirne of the Communications Workers whose union approved a similar wage hike for 500,000 telephone workers just before the freeze.

Nixon told Congress Thursday the 90-day freeze will end as scheduled Nov. 13.

"But I assure the Congress and the American people that when this first temporary and necessarily drastic action is over, we shall take all the steps needed to see that America is not again afflicted by the virus of runaway inflation," Nixon said.

Business leaders have been invited to see Nixon Monday, agriculture leaders Tuesday and congressional leaders Sept. 17, the White House said.

Woodcock said Hodgson told him the labor leaders will be consulted continuously as Nixon shapes his post-freeze policy.

Woodcock said labor leaders still oppose Nixon's proposed business investment tax credit as a "give-away" to major corporations, and will fight it in Congress.

Nixon, urging Congress to enact the measure, said it would encourage business to invest in new plant equipment to create more jobs. But Woodcock argued the corporations would probably buy equipment displacing workers, and thereby worsen the unemployment rate which stands near a nineyear high.

Woodcock said he would propose to Nixon a permanent wage-price review board with power to subpoena company and union leaders for questioning about any price or wage hikes con idered excessive, but qith no power to block such hikes except through focusing "the power of public opinion" on them.

Meany has said organized labor could cooperate in a laborindustry public board to curb inflation if the board set its own regulations without edicts from the government, even though the government might retain power to punish violators of board decisions.

Bond Threatens Own Suit

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Democratic Revenue Director James E. Schaffner has filed one suit in a continuing feud over access to income tax returns and now Republican State Auditor Christopher "Kit" Bond is threatening to do the same.

Bond said Thursday he has asked Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth to investigate the possibility of legal action to make Schaffner cough up the returns.

Bond said he didn't want to audit them, but needed to have access to them in order to continue his audit of the Department of Revenue. He said his auditors need to know how much money came in, how it was handled and where it went.

Unless he gets immediate access to the returns, Bond said, there is no assurance they'll still be available later. He noted two mysterious fires Feb. 19 and May 3 destroyed some Revenue Department records.

In a confrontation with Schaffner Wednesday, Deputy Auditor Robert L. James demanded to see the income tax records and Schaffner turned him down.

Schaffner filed a suit, in Cole County Circuit Court last week to determine whether he can legally disclose information in the tax returns. He took the position he would be criminally liable if he made them available.

But Bond said the attorney general ruled previously it would be all right to turn records over to a data processing firm for handling and Schaffner would not incur any criminal liability.

He also noted that in the last audit of the income tax unit, in the summer of 1969, Democratic Auditor Haskell Holman's staff was allowed to see income tax returns.

"The director of revenue has no right to determine which records will or will not be made availabe for examination by the state auditor," Bond said.

"By Constitution and statutes we are given the right to access to such records as are necessary to conduct audits in accordance with sound governmental practices."

In response to a reporter's question, Bond said his inquiry into Revenue Department operations had nothing to do with reports that he might seek the Republican nomination for governor.

He said all he wanted to do was perform the duties of his office as state auditor properly.

Fire Origin Sought

Firemen this morning are examining the remains of a two-story frame home that burned last night to find the cause of the fire.

A call from an unidentified screaming woman at 10:18 p.m. last night brought firemen to the Thomas Dunn house at 810 North Ranney. When firemen arrived flames were shooting from the south upstairs window and the roof and the fire was burning out of control.

Apparently the fire started in an upstairs bedroom and spread to the rest of the house. The cause of the fire is unknown. The inside of the house was gutted but little damage was done to the exterior.

When firemen arrived, a call was placed for assistance from a second fire engine.

Firemen said they were surprised they saved anything. The fire was coming out of the roof.

The Dunns were away, but a smaller house at the rear of the Dunn property was occupied by young people. Police had been called to the smaller house moments before the fire alarm when a neighbor said that apparently a party was in progress and complained of a disturbance.

Patrolman Sammie Hinton warned the young people and left. He said he drove about three blocks from the house and noticed flames coming from the roof of the larger house. Hinton radioed the call to a police dispatcher and the firemen were alerted.

Nearly 1,700 feet of water hose were laid in fighting the blaze, but firemen were hampered by motorists, apparently from the party, who ran over the fire hoses.

One hose was broken and words were exchanged between a firemen and a party goer.

Webb said the loss of the fire hose was not a major problem in fighting the blaze but added that it could have been a danger to the firemen handling the hose. Webb said that the sudden release of pressure from a water hose when broken could throw a fireman from a ladder.

Firemen worked more than two hours in extinguishing the blaze.

Easton Bound Over

CHARLESTON — Matthew Easton, Jr., 42, Charleston, was bound over to circuit court Thursday following a preliminary hearing on a second degree murder charge before Magistrate T. J. Brown, Jr.

Easton is accused in the shooting of Leroy Johnson of Charleston. Johnson was shot in the stomach with a 38 caliber pistol August 14. He died in the Missouro Delta Community hospital in Sikeston Aug. 19.

Bond was reduced from $5,000 to $1,000. Easton did not post bond and is in the Mississippi county jail.

Call on Oran Mayor Critic

Postal Response Made

ORAN– Two representatives of Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, Washington D.C., met with Mayor Kenneth Ransdell and Postmaster Elwood Thompson Thursday afternoon to discuss the declining postal service. Ransdell has protested the decline.

David Ordway, from the consumer advocate office of the postmaster general, and Herman Dodson, special advisor to the office of the postmaster general, talked with Ransdell, Thompson, and employees of the post office for nearly three hours on how much mail is handled by the post office and the ways postal service has been cut.

"We presented our case to the two men from the standpoint of not just Oran but the Oran area," Mayor Ransdell said. "Approximately 25,000 persons are affected by our postal service."

Ransdell said the representatives "seemed rather responsive" to the postal situation but "were unable to tell us anything substantial now." He said the city won't know anything until after the two men make their report to the postmaster general. He said he had no idea when that would be.

The mayor commented:

"I think the reason they came down here was a combination of letters that we sent to Missouri senators (Thomas F. Eagleton and Stuart Symington) and the President and because of the press coverage we have gotten in your paper and on area television."

In Ransdell's letter to President Nixon, he said "the post office department has cut our Sunday and holiday service 100 per cent, our Saturday service 75 per cent, our weekday service 50 per cent, raised our postage 25 per cent,

5,000 See Sky, Float Show in Portageville

By NADINE TOWNSEND

PORTAGEVILLE — A skydiving exhbition and grand float parade at the 24th annual National Soybean Festival was viewed by more than 5,000 Thursday night.

A three-man parachuting team from Bootheel Sport Parachuting Center, Kennett, landed on target at 7:15 p.m. on Main Street, and was followed by a mile long, 41-unit parade of marching bands, floats commemorating Missouri's 150 years of statehood and queen contestants.

First prize of $150 in float competition went to the Trinity Baptist Church float depicting famous Missourians.

Kiwanis Club float simulating a Mississippi river sternwheeler won second prize of $100. The old band stand float entered by Portageville Garden club received third place award of $50.

Judges were Mrs. Ruby McClure, Gideon; Mrs, Vera Ashley and Mrs. Dot Scobey, both of New Madrid.

High school bands participating were from Bernie, Campbell, Caruthersville, Gideon, North Pemiscot, New Madrid, Parma, Senath-Hornersville and Portageville.

A National Soybean dance, sponsored by the Jaycees, is tonight at the armory following a football game between the Portageville Bulldogs and St. Vincent of Perryville at Reaves athletic field. Music will be provided by the Interstate 55 band of Memphis.

Activities Saturday include a tractor pulling contest at 6:30 p.m. at Meatte Memorial City Park. A beauty pageant is scheduled at 8 p.m. at the high school gymnasium. Among contestants registered are Sue Ellen Mills, Lilbourn; Sherrie Sherrod, Marston; Suzanne Williams, Portageville; Ann Hillis, Portageville; Dianna Werner, Gideon; Amenda Smith, Portageville; Debbie Kinley, Caruthersville; Melanie Barnes, Steele; Elizabeth Ann Harper, Sikeston; Judy Green, Kennett; Jeanne Copeland, Portageville; Patti McCarroll, Malden; and Linda Lou McCready, Portageville.

Slaying Case Motions

BENTON — William Timothy Kirk of Sikeston, accused of murder, entered two motions in circuit court Thursday before Circuit Judge Marshall Craig.

His attorney filed a motion to require the state to produce any favorable evidence toward their client and filed a second motion to supress evidence.

The motion to supress evidence grew from a charge by Kirk's attorneys that Kirk's car was taken illegally by Sheriff John Dennis and searched for evidence.

During the search, Dennis found a substance on the floor board mat that resembled blood. The mat was sent to highway patrol labratory headquarters in Jefferson City, but the results of the test haven't been disclosed.

Kirk is charged with the fatal shooting of 25-year-old James Allen Roose in July. Roose was found dead on Ables Road, south of Sikeston in Miner. He had been shot four times in the face at close range by a .38 caliber pistol.

Kirk was bound over to circuit court following his preliminary hearing in Sikeston.

Judge Craig set Sept. 23 as the date to hear the two motions filed by Kirk's

REFLEX LIBERALISM

Conditioned liberals, who react to the merest tinkle of Pavlov's bell, need exposure in the worst sort of way. Up to now they have had it nearly all their way.

If they uttered the word "patriot," their bearded and long-haired followers would laugh in ridicule. If they said "Communist," a great chorus of "McCarthysim!" would make the welkin ring. This would be followed by echoes: "Imperialist! Wormonger! Xenophobe! Reactionary! Fink! Redbaiter!"

Some of these intellectuals and pseudo-intellectuals are pushing the line that nationalism and patriotism are old hat. They seek a coalition with Communists, thereby suppressing the great differences between honest progressives and totalitarian gangsters. To make the coalition work they would expunge such words as "patriot" that made America great because such terms stand for strength, integrity, freedom, order under law, the right to own land and other property, and the duty to protect those rights.

The reflex liberals take a position above the battle. They advocate no-win wars, along with unilateral disarmament to the point of defenselessness. The trouble with such a doctrine is that the Soviets and the Red Chinses would simply wait until the United States was naked — like a plucked chicken ready for the knife. It is high time to expose the sophomoric and dangerous shallowness of the liberal approach to domestic and foreign affairs.

PUERTO RICAN
INDEPENDENTISTAS

There may be a hint -- hopefully without the violence -- of West Side Story when Puerto Rican independence forces stage their biggest-ever demonstration on Sunday, Sept. 12, in New York City. The Young Lords and the Puerto Rican Student Union, both supporting independence for the island and severence of all U.S. ties, are expected to participate in large numbers. The demonstrations will coincide with the annual National Governors Conference in San Juan. And it precedes the Sept. 21 opening of the UN General Assembly where Cuba reportedly is planning to introduce a resolution for Puerto Rican independence.

The three-sided political struggle on the island among those favoring continued commonwealth status, those desiring statehood and those advocating independence show the independentistas in the minority. A 1967 plebiscite found over 60 per cent in favor of commonwealth, 38 per cent for statehood and less than one per cent for independence. In the last election in 1968, the independence parties won only 3 per cent of the vote. But the independence movement has been winning new recruits, especially among younger people, and some observers believe that the independence parties could capture up to 10 per cent of the vote in the 1972 elections.

With little hope of electoral victory, the more radical independentistas have turned to violence. Since 1967, there have been over 150 incidences of bombing and arson of U.S. - owned businesses. The Armed Revolutionary Independence Movement and the Revolutionary Armed Liberation Movement, Puerto Rico's most militant leftist organizations, have taken credit for much of the violence. Government officials claim that these groups are led by a cadre of pro-independence Communists who have been trained in Cuba. Perto Rican governor Louis A. Ferre feels that the independentistas are fighting a losing battle because Puerto Rico's commonwealth status has given the island the highest standard of living in Latin America. One young Puerto Rican favoring independence explained: "The people don't feel they are exploited by the United States. All they can see are the schools, hospitals, phones and electricity."

PEOPLE VERSUS
FEDERAL BUREAUCRACY

A returning vacationer from Colorado reports an interesting incident which may become a testing ground between the people and Federal bureaucracy.

Montezuma county and several individual citizens of that farming area are suing the Colorado Department of Social Services which runs welfare in the state, to avoid being saddled with more costs of welfare administration. Adding to the situation is the fact that the State of Colorado is going to sue nearby Weld county because the board of supervisors there has decided to pull out of any participation in the welfare program.

Montezuma county, whose county seat is Cortez, is an agricultural county of 13,000 people, but it is currently supporting a welfare staff of fourteen people, and the state is seeking to force them to bring this total up to 21 people.

According to the county clerk's office there are 457 in the county on old age pensions, 137 family units in the aid to dependent children program, 62 adults with a total of 113 children, 25 clients for day care, 21 clients in foster homes for child welfare, 1 tuberculosis patient, 65 needy disabled, 9 on general assistance which takes in medical care, eyeglasses and similar matters.

This apparently adds up to a total of 700 cases, currently being handled by a staff of 14 which includes a director of welfare, a casework supervisor, 6 caseworkers, a food stamp cashier and various other titles.

What apparently brought matters to a head is that the county supervisors fired a caseworker who is suing for back pay. The state welfare agency is demanding the caseworker's reinstatement, plus the hiring of six more on the welfare staff in Montezuma county, plus the provision for more office space and facilities. This would result in a ratio of one welfare worker to less than 35 cases.

To make the situation more confusing, the Colorado legislature prescribes in detail how much taxes a county can levy for specific purposes. Under the law, Montezuma county can only levy a tax of three mills for welfare. The county has now run out of this fund. But in far off Washington, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has decreed that unless Montezuma county performs according to the prescribed program, it will cut off the Federal payments to the entire state of Colorado which amount to 80 per cent of the state welfare expenditures. This has created heavy pressure on the county by the state administration to dig up the money in some way, even though the State legislature so far says the county cannot legally do this.

But there is a lesson to be learned from this situation in Montezuma county -- that more and more people are beginning to view any money given by the Federal government with fear and suspicion because of the strings attached. This applies to more than welfare as the schools, colleges and other community factors can attest.

BUSINESS MEN ARE LIKE
HIS GIRL A VALENTINE
BUT DIDN'T SIGN IT

— and then wondered why she didn't smile on him, next time they met.

It is business whose taxes support America's schools 1½ days every week.

It is business men whose companies and private gifts largely assure the success of hospital and charity drives and pay for the research seeking to cure disease and poverty.

It is business that is pouring money into cleaning up slums, and training the hardcore unemployed.

It is business whose research (and, yes, search for legitimate profit) has so improved home appliances and factory machines that work on them is done better and easier in 7 hours that used to take 12, and used to make us old men and women at 40.

But do you ever see these dramatic facts on TV? Or featured in your newspaper?

Business men say they're too busy to talk about such things. So they "hid their light under a bushel" — and wonder why it smothers there.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes it just doesn't pay to be thrifty. Take my frugal daughter's recent attempt to save $12 by flying to Canada on youth fare.

Having earned the money herself, she was reluctant to part with any more of it than was absolutely necessary to get her from New York to Toronto, where she was to board a train for Vancouver, British Columbia.

She started out a day ahead of time, arriving at the airport early in the morning with a standby plane ticket, a bright yellow backpack, a suitcase, a totebag, a coat, a purse and a combination radio-phonograph.

The situation looked promising. The airline relieved Gay of her luggage and soon she was trotting out to the plane, muttering smugly to herself, "A penny saved is a penny earned."

But what she should have been saying was "Don't count your chickens before they are hatched." At the last moment a full-paying customer dashed aboard and it was back to the departure lounge for Gay.

It turned out all the other flights to Toronto were fully booked, as well as the ones the next day that would get her there in time to make train connections. So she decided to take a plane to Buffalo, and a bus from there. She was duly ushered aboard, only to be dumped again just before takeoff.

With a fist full of dimes and a heart full of hope—both of which rapidly diminished—she then started calling all the other airlines that fly to Canada. But the Labor Day weekend was approaching and there were no seats available even at full fare.

A quick call to the bus terminal revealed that the only bus that would complete its 12hour trip in time to make the train would be leaving in little more than an hour. Gay rushed frantically to cash in her ticket, retrieve her baggage and make a dash into town.

But the luggage was already winging to Toronto in the plane she was on originally. She was advised to go out to the airport when she got there and pick it up, but the drawback to this simple plan was that in the confusion she had lost the baggage checks. A sympathetic airline employe called Toronto to explain that someone would turn up the next day for the impedimenta, which should be released to her despite lack of formal claim papers.

All well and good, except that there remained the possibility, not entirely unknown in airline operations, that the luggage might not appear where and when it was supposed to, and the harried traveler had visions of embarking on a three-day cross-country train trip without even a change of hair ribbons.

Well, she made the bus and she got her stuff in Toronto and she didn't miss the train. But the whole thing cost her a little more than anticipated:

Transportation from airport to New York City bus terminal; person-to-person telephone call at day rates to friend in Toronto she was to have spent the night with; transportation to airport and back to pick up luggage; and—cruellest blow of all—as the refund for her standby ticket she was inadvertently given $10 too little, a fact that in her agitated state she didn't discover until she opened her wallet to buy the bus ticket.

HOW TO KEEP THE LID ON

Now that the shock of President Nixon's announcement of a tough, new economic policy has worn off, the question is: How will the nation respond to it?

The initial reaction has been good. Both businessmen and workers had come to realize they were getting nowhere with the inflation that was taking money out of pockets faster than it could put it in. They were ready for a change, for strong national leadership.

It was unfortunate that the administration did not have a well developed contingency plan ready for the change. Some quiet advance planning could have prevented some of the confusion that is developing over details of the interim program the President announced over the weekend. But thus far there has been general acceptance of this oversight and recognition of the fact that the President felt he faced a national emergency.

How well the government lid can be kept on the conomy will depend upon continued public acceptance of the need and congressional actions to supplement the orders already issued by the President.

Workers who had been scheduled for cost of living increases, promotions in grade or previously negotiated wage increases will be the most unhappy about the new orders, because they will limit spending in the year ahead even though some financial commitments already had been made on the expected increases. Those workers will need to show patience until the 90-day period is ended to see what sort of accommodations the administration will be able to work out for them.

Even those who are hit directly by the orders can take some comfort in the fact that their expenses will not rise above what they have been.

And, of course, everyone will be watching closely to see what Congress does in response to the President's call for tax reductions. There had been considerable demand in Congress for such action even before the President made his move.There is goodchance, therefore, that Congress will act speedily on that aspect of the program when it reconvenes and even that it may go somewhat beyond what the president has asked in an effort to stimulate the economy. That, together with a strenuous effort to keep interest rates down, should produce more bargains for the individual consumers within the next year than he possibly could have achieved through the higher wage and higher - price spiral.

THE PLAN WILL WORK, with minor adjustments, if everyone really is convinced it is workable. Everyone will have to sacrifice a little for the greater gain ahead. Anyone — worker, merchant, manufacturer, or banker — who tries to circumvent the plan will be endangering all of it and damaging himself as much as those who have to pay the higher prices he asks.

Everyone should realize, too, that chiseling will lead to demands for even tougher controls and continuance of the regulation of the economy for a longer period than will be necessary if all cooperate from the start.

Thetitle of the following poem is "The Bee and The Cow" and the author is a man known as Anonymous:

'Twas a sunny morn in June,
The bee had put his pipes atune,
And buzzed his way across the field.
He buzzed and ate full many an hour,
Then crawled into a dainty flower
And curled himself up for a nap
The same as any drowsy chap.
A cow came browsing through the moor,
And towards the little flowerlet bore.
Not knowing that the bee was there
So rudely wakened from his doze
His beeship's fiery temper rose —
"Old cow," he said, "I'll sting you deep
When I have finished with my sleep."
So, cuddled in his darksome den,
Eftsoon, he went to sleep again.
He slumbered on 'til early dawn,
But, when he woke, the cow was gone!

RED "JUSTICE"

The radical element of this country which is protest prone, especially when it becomes outraged over the doings of "imperialistic Uncle Sam," ought to study the case of poor Vladimir Dremlyuga, 31, of Leningrad. Vladimir has caught it twice from Soviet courts, the last a three-year stretch for making a remark in prison about the Soviet Union being a police state. He already was doing time for protesting in Red Square back in 1968 against the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia. That mistake cost him three years also.

Such are the affairs of justice in a people's socialistic country where the thing to do is scream about the imperialistic Yankees and ignore Russian invasions of Czechoslovakia and Hungary and any of her other neighbors that might not be confirming with the communist way of doing things.

In view of Mr. Dremlyuga's experience, one could safely conclude, it seems, that the constitution of the U.S.S.R. does not have a First Amendment guaranteeing freedom of speech. But those in this country who preach the radical line of the socialistic countries rely heavily on that freedom, including the right to protest the arrest of law violators who swarm into Washington occasionally to frustrate and paralyze the government. It is unlikely that anyone will protest Mr. Dremlyuga's fate. And that includes the professional radical element in the U.S.

Maybe the case of Dremlyuga will cause some of the misled who dwell in our midst to pause and think. Maybe they will conclude that they do protesteth too much.

WASHINGTON-- The FBI's use of lie detectors to locate news leaks may be upsetting to the New York Times. But for us, it's strictly routine.

Long ago, we became resigned to this sort of intimidation. We've counted as many as 18 FBI agents at one time searching for our sources. They've used not only lie detectors but third-degree methods and grand jury subpoenas.

The latest investigation was touched off, the press reported, by a New York Times account on July 22 of the secret U.S. position at the strategic arms limitation talks.

Actually, Attorney General John Mitchell began investigating news leaks last spring. He ordered the FBI, specifically, to find out who was slipping us Pentagon secrets often intended for the "eyes only" of the top brass.

Military gumshoes grilled suspects behind the doors of room 3E993 at the Pentagon. FBI agents followed up, flashing their credentials and asking terse questions. Lie detectors were used; some suspects were tailed; their neighbors were questioned.

At least one suspect, a mild, bespectacled Pentagon aide named Gene Smith, was badgered, threatened, cursed and, finally, subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury in Norfolk, Va. But unhappily, the vaunted FBI had fingered the wrong man. Smith denied under oath that he had given us so much as the time of day.

U.S. Attorney Brian Gettings admitted to us afterward that a "federal agency" had suggested he go after Smith. "We probably do have the wrong man," the chastened prosecutor adknowledged.

TRIPLE THREAT

With the publication of the Pentagon papers, Mitchell broadened his investigation of news leaks. Then in July, the gumshoes moved into the State Department after the appearance of three more sensitive stories:

1. The New York Times account by William Beecher giving details of the U.S. bargaining position on arms limitaiton;

2. Another New York Times report by Tad Szulc about arms shipments to Pakistan; and

3. A column by us quoting from a State Department message that had been hand-carried in a sealed envelope to U.S. AID Administrator John Hannah.

Were these news leaks "prejudicial to the national interest," as State Department spokesman Robert McCloskey claimed? Or do government officials use the security stamp to cover up their mistakes and to manage the news for political purpose?

Let's take the message that was delivered to Hannah in a sealed envelope. This was a hush-hush report from our Ambassador to Kenya, Robinson McIlvaine, on the highjinks of the AID administrator in Kenya. It was classified, we believe, solely to spare the involved officials from embarrassment.

But admittedly, the Pentagon investigation was triggered by our publication of sensitive information. We reported, for example. that Gen. Creighton Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, had been asked to draw up top-secret contingency plans last October for a three-day, seven-day or ten-day aerial assault upon North Vietnam. We revealed no military details, except that the contingency plans included the bombing and mining of Haiphong harbor.

Here was evidence that President Nixon was preparing plans to expand the war at the same time that he was promising to curtail it. We thought it was in the public interest to print the story.

OFFICIAL DESCREPANCY

We also revealed that MACSOG teams, composed of U.S. special forces and South Vietnamese rangers, continued to operate inside Cambodia and Loas at the same time our spokesmen were claiming no American troops were in those countries. We cited secret messages, which referred to the Cambodian raids by the code name "Salem House" and to the Loas raids as "Prairie Fire."

Again we felt the public was entitled to know about this little discrepancy.

Perhaps the story that caused the most embarrassment (and produced the most intensive investigation) was our disclosure that the U.S. had been intercepting South Vietnamese President Thieu private communications. These were picked up and decoded by the National Security Agency, then passed on to the White House and other agencies. The intercepted messages were identified by the code name "Gout."

This unpleasant revelation, no doubt, was awkward for the U.S. But we strongly believe that, in a democracy, the people have the right to know what their officials are doing. Since no military security was involved, we published the story.

For the same reason, we reported that Adm. Thomas Moorer, the Joint Chiefs' chairman, received a "Flash" message after the daring Son Tay raid informing him that the North Vietnamese prison compound hadn't been occupied for three months.

The real reason for the news-leak investigations, in our opinion, is to scare government employees into silence so they won't give out information that their bosses don't want the public to know.

No less than State Secretary Bill Rogers, a former Attorney General acknowledged that the lie detector "is not a very good instrument, in my opinion, for showing guilt." It is a good instrument, however, for intimidating State Department officials.

For the men who govern us, in order to remain in power, would like to control what we are told about their administration.

Inside Labor

Warning the President:
Meany Approves strikes for all lost pay the very minute freeze is over

WASHINGTON: There's always a first time andpink-shirted George Meany, a most modish patriarch who avers he never did call or lead a strike, chomped on roast beef instead of the now most famous cigar in the land, and laid it on the line at lunch the other day.

In effect, he warned President Nixon that if he (Meany) led a national union instead of the coalition of unions known as the AFL-CIO, he would give the President about one second after the freeze before he would call a strike if employers refused to make good all economic gains frozen during the freeze.

In effect, Meany called for instant strikes, deferred strikes to whirl out if deferred wages and cost-of-living increases were not paid retroactively.

This may have been a roundhouse swing by the heavyweight chief of chiefs to frighten President Nixon. If it was, it missed. During his 11-minute Labor Day address the President knowingly and deliberately brushed off virtually all of labor's criticism and the implied wave of strikes. This the President did by wrapping the labor assault up in one phrase as that of a "special interest" group.

But George Meany, who really hasn't been a plumber for some 50 years, makes no idle threats. Judge for yourselves. Here's how he put it when asked whether he would prefer to renegotiate contracts after the freeze rather than see the workers denied deferred raises:

"Well, I don't know." said the chief of the biggest labor complex in the free world. "If it was my contract--if I were the head of a union and had one of these contracts--the very day the freeze was over, I would say, 'Mr. Employer, come on, give it to me.' No renegotiation, go on strike that very minute for violation of contract. Now that would be my approach."

Meany-watchers know that when the veteran chief says "that very minute" he doesn't mean 90 seconds later. Later he was asked if the obtaining of deferred wages and benefits retroactively after the freeze was a non-negotiable demand.

"Well, I can't speak for the unions," said the chief who has been known to do just that, "that have these contracts. They have to speak for themselves. My attitude would be that if I were charged with taking care of the affairs of the union and had one of these contracts, the day the freeze was over I would say, 'Mr. Employer, I want that money for my members. It's just as simple as that.' And if they come up with something that bars unions from making that sort of demand, hell, I don't see how labor could be a party to this because this is government control."

Then Meany said that labor would cooperate if "they" came up with a voluntary wage-price monitoring system.

Meany, now one of the nation's glamour stories, was probably more graphic than some of his colleagues, except one. He is the United Auto Workers General Motors (GM) Department Director Irving Bluestone, who said, "I think all hell is going to break loose" when "the men realize they're not getting the money they struck for."

That could be. Certainly Meany's words, though the United Auto Workers Union (UAW) is independent of the AFL—CIO, will have their impact on well over a million workers--especially those UAW members who are due for productivity and cost-of-living increases the end of November and beginning of December.

UAW Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey, speaking in that velvet glove, iron-fist tone of his, reported a million workers are due for such increases then --"coming to some $800,000 a day for GM employes alone." During the freeze "workers in 801 plants are due wage increases affecting 216,554 employes including some of the biggest such as Caterpillar Tractor Co. and Bendix."

Mazey said the union would appeal the ban on wage increases, etc., to the Cost of Living Council. Also, there are 170 contracts terminating during the freeze affecting 100,000 UAW members and he adds, "It will be impossible to negotiate a contract because we don't know what will happen after Nov. 13. So we are negotiating in a no-man's land."

Leonard Woodcock, president of the 1.4 million auto workers, can be counted on to declare some kind of war on the White House at the union's special Nov. 13 (Detroit) convention-- if there is no promise of full retroactivity. And who knows if this won't be taken as a signal for local strikes?

There's much the same sentiment in the usually "quiet man," I.W. "Abe" Abel, who not only heads the United Steelworkers of America but also the AFL-CIO'S Industrial Union Dept.--scheduled for a national convention in October. Abel told me he believes there is no sense in renegotiating the contracts which were so dramatically settled in "can, aluminum, copper and steel" since the year's beginning.

"Our feeling is that these agreements are legal and binding," says he, "and whatever provisions are in them certainly we expect fulfilled. While the freeze may prohibit them during the freeze, when it's lifted however, we want their application. If employers try to renege, strong differences of opinion will develop. And some action, you can be sure.

"I would assume that any local union which has a commitment when the freeze ends will insist there is no merit in renegotiation."

This means--strikes. If walkouts for money gains--economic packages--are banned by Presidential directive, who can stop "non=economic" strikes, or hitting the bricks on grievances?

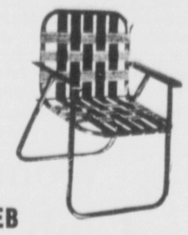

This is the spectre with which Meany is haunting President Nixon -- strikes in steel, coal, rails, auto, waterfront, etc. For in the final analysis, between elections, if clout comes to clout, labor's punch maily mainly is in hitting the bricks. This the President knows. So watch his fast footwork.

Quail Season to Begin on Nov. 10

By RON JAYNES

The four-man Missouri Conservation commission, meeting in Sikeston Thursday, set Nov. 10 as the opening day of quail season and delayed setting of bag limit and length of season until its October meeting.

Larry R. Gale, associate director of the conservation department, noted that the quail population looks about the same as last year. He said he sees some increase in the south and southwest portions of the state. He predicted a decline in the northwest due to weather conditions.

Robert G. DeLaney of Charleston, commission vice chairman, noted that if the prediction of low of quail numbers holds true in the South, the commission will come under fire from residents who urged that the season be cut last season. The biologists felt that it would be of no advantage to close the season.

The commisssion was criticized for the action, DeLaney said.

The commission. headed by Harry Mills of Clinton, received reports from Carl R. Noren, conservation department director. Larry R. Gale, P. G. Barnickal and Allen Grohn, Associate directors and Julien L. O. 'Malley, legal counsel.

There was a discussion on the teal season. It was pointed out that the season has been set for sunrise until 1 hour before sunset but federal law specifies sunrise to sunset.

The citizens committee for Conservation was praised for its work, but it was noted that the group was on financially rocky roads. The citizens group seeks to provide more public lands for Missourians for recreation purposes.

It calls for construction of 30 small lakes, 10 large impoundments and 80 lakes inside urban areas.

A proposal by the committee to purchase 50,000 acres of forest and lease another 300,000 acres would be financed through a tax on soft drinks.

Noren noted that 301 men will be tested Saturday for 18 conservation agent job openings. The tests will be followed by interviews and prospective agents will undergo a four-month training course after Jan. 1, 1972.

The next monthly meeting was set for Branson, Oct. 5 and 6.

CHARLOTTE LANPHER

Mrs. Lanpher was born in Cape Girardeau, MO. and her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jim Burris of Route 4, Sikeston, Mo. She attended Vanduser grade school and graduated from Scott County Central High School. She then attended Western Kentucky State University at Bowling Green, Kentucky. She received her B. S. degree from Southeast Missouri State.

Mrs. Lanpher resides at Route 1, Benton Mo. with her husban Nick, who is basketball coach at Kelly High School.They have two daughters, Monica Kaye who is 4 ½ years old and Krista Nichelle 7 ½ months.

Mrs. Lanpher's hobbies include sewing and making craft objects. She also enjoys decorating her home.

When ask her opinion of the students of OHS Mrs. Lanpher replyed: "I hope that through my work, girls will be encouraged to further their education in college home economics or other areas. I have already found that many of the girls in my classes have the material to further their education. Some just need an extra boost of encouragement."

JOE SCOTT

"Good discipline, lost of hustle, being able to put out 100%, and team work," are the outstanding qualities Coach Scott will attain from the varsity squad.

Coach Scott, a previous Oran Coach, has been teaching at West Side High School, right outside Jonesborro, Arkansas. Although, West Side is a larger school, he doesn't feel they have any advantages over Oran.

After seeing the boys in practice for only a few days, Scott has already decided that he has plans for a good season. Scott admits that the aspect of the game he likes best is, "Being ahead at the end of the game."

Coach Scott feels that school enthusiasm and support are important throughout the season. He is interested in promoting the support of our student body, in return the boys will be encouraged to do their best on the court.

As the 71-72 basketball season rolls around lets all put every effort forward to show Coach Scott and all the players that we are supporting them in every way we can!

LANA COX

Miss Lana Cox is beginning her teaching career as 3rd grade teacher of Oran Elementary School. Although this is her first year to teach, she has definite ideas about methods of teaching. She thinks school should be enjoyable, and as a teacher try to make it fun for the students while learing.

Miss Cox lives at Chaffee, Mo. where she attended High School. She later attended college at Southeast Missouri State.

Cox Named Officer of Educators

As secretary of the international organization, Dr. Cox, who is also an assistant professor in the department of industrial and technical education at Southeast Missouri State, will be responsible for conducting officer elections for the next two years and maintaining the membership list of IGAEA.

The new officer has been a member of the Southeast Missouri State faculty since 1964. Born in Fisher, Ark., he finished high school in Little Rock and attended Kansas State Teachers College at Pittsburg for both his bachelor's and master's degrees.

His doctorate in education was awarded by the University of Arkansas in January, 1970.

Dr. Cox taught in the public schools for nine years before coming to Southeast Missouri State. He is a member of the local, state, and national education associations and a life member of the American Industrial Arts Association.

Had N.Y. State Senator Thomas Platt approved of Theodore Roosevelt's policies as governor of New York, the energetic Roosevelt might never have become president. To "kick him upstairs," Platt nominated him to the obscurity of the vice-presidency, The World Almanac notes.

Fall Classes Begin at State College

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Southeast Missouri State College campus has been a beehive of activity all week, and students plunge headlong into fall semester classes Thursday.

It will probably be at least Monday however, before the student body realizes it must settle down to the serious business of getting an education. For in addition to completing the enrollment process and making class schedule changes this week, the students have been enjoying nightly extra- curricular activities.

These will continue through Sunday. They include the college's first football game of the season Saturday night.

Classes will continue uninterrupted until the Thanksgiving holiday which begins at noon on Nov. 24. Classes will resume at 8 a.m. on Nov. 29 and continue through Dec. 17 when the college will break for Christmas.

The semester's final countdown will begin at 8 a.m. Jan. 3, with final examinations set for Jan. 17-20. Prior to the exams, however, Southeast Missouri State will stage its first mid - year commencement ever.

This will come on Jan. 16. In the past students who completed their degree requirements did not formally receive their diplomas until the traditional spring graduation ceremonies.

Amazing nail beauty for problem nails, splitting chipping, etc.

In this modern age, your nails are constantly being abused by detergents, chemicals and other material which causes loss of natural oils in nails, resulting in cracking, peeling and chipping. After years of research, a team of professional chemists, cosmetologists and dermatologists developed a protein buffing cream to beautify unsightly nails. We call it ReNew Protein Fingernail Conditioner. ☐ Renew is not a lacquer or hardener. It's a pure fingernail conditioner containing lanolin, protein and silica. When ReNew is properly applied once a week, using our specially designed suede skin buffer, it will give your nails an appearance of being coated with a clear polish. Unlike nail polish, this sheen will not chip, crack or peel, even in dishwater. It also provides an excellent base for nail color. Polish remover will not harm the sheen. ReNew contains silica, the same type of polishing agent used by dentists. Silica is more effective than pumice in removing roughness and ridges, thus providing a higher sheen. Remember, no pre-soaking or special preparation of the nails is required before you apply ReNew fingernail conditioner. No liquid sealer is needed. When ReNew is applied once a week properly with our specially designed suede skin buffer, the roughness and ridges of your nails are smoothed away. Moisture and protein are buffed into the surface of the nails, which helps prevent dryness. The buffing action stimulates circulation for healthier nail growth. ☐ Buffing regularly with ReNew fingernail conditioner, using our specially designed buffers should help you have beautiful, healthy, cuticle free fingernails. ReNew is for the entire family, even men . . . and it's non-toxic. ☐ Save money by doing your own nails with ReNew for approximately 6c a week . . . and you, too, can enjoy beautiful nails. Order your supply of ReNew fingernail conditioner and the specially designed ReNew buffer today . . . and receive our free gift of one tube of ReNew Cuticle Conditioner.

The Years Are Short Between Kindergarten and College

By SHIRLEY PRITCHETT

Remember your first child's first day at kindergarten? How for weeks you had warned him that no amount of tears, pleading, or pretense of tummy aches would keep him from going?

Then the big day, you took him firmly by the hand, prepared yourself mentally for the ordeal you were sure was coming upon entering that classroom door; only to have him spy a friend seated at the third table, smile broadly and say "goodby mommy"— His first big step toward independence.

The short years between kindergarten and high school graduation (but weren't you glad each fall when school started) each hold memories of crisis you met, survived and tucked away with all the pleasant experiences of being a mother. Each year brought you one step closer toward the day when it finally hits you; your 18-year-old is no longer a boy. He has registered for the draft, he can vote, do most anything he would like except buy liquor, in most places, and get married without your consent.

How do you express the feeling a mother has when her first child moves out of his room and goes away to college?

I read where one mother described it this way, "It's like having a baby; no one will talk about how it really feels until your into it and it's too late."

It's a combination of many feelings all wrapped up in one big lump in your throat; a king size ache in your heart; loneliness; realization that you are getting older; highlighted by happiness and pride for he is your boy, er-man.

You prepare for the big day from high school graduation until the night before he leaves. You tell yourself you're ready, for, of course, you want him to go to school; you promise yourself you will not get teary-eyed and choked up and that you will be happy and just as excited as he as he enters the world outside your own private little domain, where you have scolded, protected, trained and guided, (not without numerous mistakes,) him.

Oh, there are many rewards in having an 18-year-old-college student. For instance; your car it's there when you need it and there's still gas in the tank; there is more food in the refrigerator and the grocery bill is cut almost in half; the stereo no longer shakes the windows; all dirty clothes can now be found in the hamper, with the exception of younger brother's this too shall pass, and not under his bed, on the desk or the closet floor; there is much less hair in the bathroom basin and one cleaning a day in the bathroom is sufficient. You no longer serve as an answering service for the telephone; and there is one less bed to make each morning.

On the other hand; It was always nice to have someone run errands , (the car made it fun); the extra money saved on food and gas doesn't quite come up to the amount you coughed up at pre-enrollment; the house can be too quiet and besided you kinda liked (parts) his taste in music; you miss the exercise from stooping to pick up his scattered belongings; dad and little brother still mess up the bathroom; the phone ringing at night just might be him calling collect but it's awfully nice to hear that, "Mom" how's things at home?" "Is it all right to call my girl and have it charged to your phone?" seeing his empty made-up bed anduncluttered desk makes you realize he won't be using it for awhile.

Going to bed at night only reminds you that you don't know whether he's safely in his dorm, hopefully studying.

Your home, which has always been an open house for his friends will never be the gathering place for his new friends and it bothers you when you think that you will probably never again know all the people in his life.

Remember having older people tell you when he was small, "enjoy your children now— right now they are stepping on your toes, later it's your heart" or "You pay for your own raising when you have children of your own"? How right they were:

Adjusting to the absence of a son, since I have no daughters but I'm sure it's the same with all mothers, is never easy regardless of the circumstances. You look in the mirror, see the new gray hair and another worry line and begin to realize it's later than you thought and that yes, you are old enough to have a son in college. Perhaps you pat yourself on the back a little, after all you have reared a handsome young man, a good boy err-man, and there is a deep sense of pride inknowing you have done your best, maybe not always but you tried, to help him become independent and capable of thinking for himself, yet there's a little feeling of sadness that he doesn't need you quite so much as he did even last year.

Now you strive to look ahead to what you hope and pray is a bright and promising future and on the horizon perhaps his total step of independence.

Could that mean another period of adjustment for you?

What step comes next?

Being a mother-in-law, what else?

USDA Supplies Background Information On Soup Recall

The recall of chicken vegetable soup produced by the Campbell's Soup Co., in Paris, Tex., includes all chicken vegetable soup embossed with the code 07 P13 on the can, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service said consumers should disregard any other numbers or letters other than the 07 P13 identification. Officials of Campbell's Soup have stated that any can bearing this code should be immediately returned to the store where it was purchased.

In response to public inquiries, USDA has the following background information regarding the Campbell's chicken vegetable soup recall:

C&MS said the first indication of a possible problem was discovered on July 16 (Friday night) when chicken vegetable soup produced on July 2 was examined after the normal 14 day incubation period. Some of the cans had developed "soft swells" (lids were slightly raised from the cans). Other cans appeared normal. These "swellers" were reported to the USDA inspector at the Paris plant on Monday, July 19. He immediately requested Campbell's to initiate a recall of all chicken vegetable soup produced on July 2. It was believed at this time that these soft swells did not pose a public health hazard.

On July 28, soft swells were noted in an incubation sample of chicken vegetable soup produced on July 15.A recall of this product was initiated. In addition, Campbell's Soup officials instructed their salesmen to check grocery shelves and warehouse stocks for product produced on June 7 and June 30 and to retain any such product found.

During an extensive examination of returned product, "hard swells" (cans with swelling on both top and bottom) were discovered on Aug. 13. The laboratory study revealed bacteria with characteristics of clostridia. These bacteria were isolated and grown in test tubes. The growth fluid subsequently was injected into unprotected mice and mice which had been protected by treatment with specific botulinal antitoxin. This is the customary laboratory procedure. On August 21, (Saturday Night) this test confirmed the finding of botulism. The same test procedure was carried out on the contents of soft swell cans, yielding a negative result.

Campbell's immediately notified USDA and the Federal Food and Drug Administration of the laboratory findings and an immediate public announcement was made on Aug. 22 (Sunday night press release USDA 2753-71). State health departments in the involved 16 States were notified immediately by telephone of the recall and were asked for their cooperation in locating the product.

Samples of chicken vegetable soup are now being analyzed in USDA laboratories in Beltsville, Md.

Wildlife Painter To Be In Dexter Tuesday

DEXTER — Richard P. Grossenheider, wildlife painter of the St. Louis area, will be guest artist in he Bloomfield and Dexter school system Tuesday and Wednesday. These programs will be the first sponsored in the state by the Missouri State Council in the Arts, and cosponsored by the StoddardCo. committee on the Arts and Humanities.

Grossenheider will present a lecture-deomonstration of wildlife painting Tuesday, at 7:30 p.m. in the Dexter National Bank. There will be no admission charged. Area residents are invited to attend. An exhibit of his watercolors of wildlife will be on display in the bank and can be viewed during banking hours from Friday Sept. 24.

A zoologist and artist, Grossenheider has written and illustrated a book, "A Field Guide to the Mammels" and is working on a book about the wild canines of North America, which he will also illustrate. He has written articles for magazines and scholarly journals, including work for Life Magazine and Pic, its Australian counterpart. His radio and television experiences include a weekly conservation and natural history radio program, and he has been featured on a CBS television series on wildlife.

Art insturctors and other teachers who desire to have their students view the exhibit, may contact Bob Blankenship at the bank.

The program, "The Body Beautiful" was given by Mrs. Wayne Wright.

Co-hostess was Mrs. Don Pratt.

Libraries Offer A Change of Pace

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Recent additions to the Cape Girardeau public library could provide a change of pace in reading habits.

A fully documented nationwide study, "The Free List: Property Without Taxes," reviews the roots of real estate exemptions, how they "just growed" as a result of piecemeal local governmental action, and how they have reached a magnitude that is costly both to individual property taxpayers and to society as a whole. According to one study, about one - third of the real estate valuation in the U.S. — $600 billion out of $1.2 trillion — is tax exempt.

The Ripon Society, an organization of young, liberal Republicans, has published its latest book, "Instead of Revolution." The book is an out - growth of The Ripon Society's Youth Report, which was presented to President Nixon, and it consists of a series of essays which analyzes the discontents of American Youth and offers specific proposals for change.

Each year the library receives The Supreme court Review. The 1970 volume discusses the Burgher Court, church tax exemptions, freedom of the press, the Welfare Priority Hearing Cases, and the Boys Market Case.

For the camper and hiker, Merrill's The Hiker's and Packpacker's Handbook and Riviere's "Backcountry Camping" have been received.

These books are available for use by patrons of the SEMO Library System Libraries: Oran Public Library, Mississippi county library, Bollinger county library, annd Cape Girardeau public library.

Blodgett Couple Has 35th Wedding Anniversary

An open house celebrating the 35th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C.Goehri was given Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ray Beggs of Blodgett. Mrs. Beggs is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Goehri.

Giving the open house were their children, Mrs. Begg, SSG Louis C. Goehri, Jr., European Command, Germany ; Myrna Goehri Holland, San Juan, Puerto Rico; and Miss Gay Goehri.

The anniversary cake was topped with a bride and groom that was saved from a shower cake 35 years ago. Mrs. James Bryant of Sikeston and Mrs. W.A. Beggs of Blodgett served guests.

The house was decorated with coral rose buds, a gift from the children.

BADGES A MUST

DALLAS (AP) — Plainclothesmen in the Dallas police department must wear badges on their coat breast pocket and be accompanied by uniformed police when executing arrest or search warrants in the city's Mexican-American communities.

The department has distributed clip-on badges.

SKIERS' GOLD

BRECKENRIDGE, Colo. (AP) — Gold created three booms — in 1860, 1878 and 1898 — in this little town in the Blue River Valley 9,600 feet high in the Rocky Mountains, and now a fourth is under way, nurtured by the gold in skiers wallets.

Over the last decade a dozen miles of ski trails have been developed on the north face of Peak 8, overlooking the town from almost 12,000 feet altitude.

Owner of the Mode -O -Day is Mrs. Velva Parrish. Judges for the contest were Mary Lee Hailey and Mary Eaton.

Car Use Affects Students Grades

KANSAS CITY-- The more a student uses a car during the week, the poorer the student's grades will be, emphasized E. L. Stone, regional manager of an insurance company.

Referring to "A Teenage Pattern," an Allstate study of 20,000 high school students, Stone stated the major finding: Grades go down as driving privileges are extended.

"Parents are the only people who can supervise and enforce sensible use of the automobile during the academic year," he said.

Citing late statistics, he urged parents to exercise strict control over their children's driving.

"Parents simply must realize the importance of strict supervision of their children's driving habits," said Stone. "Young drivers have the highest crash and death rate of any age group on the road today." "The other important reason for parental control of young drivers is that their education will suffer if they are allowed too much use of a car."

He noted with concern late crash figures from the National Safety Council, which show that drivers in the 15-24 age group have a crash and death rate nearly double that of older drivers.

Young drivers under 24 have crashes at an annual rate of 41 per 100 drivers while drivers aged 40-65 have 18 collisions per 100 drivers.

"Many of these crashes could have been prevented if the drivers involved had been properly trained," said Stone. "Experience shows that trained young drivers have 50 per cent fewer crashes than untrained drivers of the same age."

But even if the young driver is well trained, studies must come before driving. A teenage pattern study showed that too much use of a car affects the grades of good students as well as poor student.

Grades start to suffer when the car is used more than two days out of five during the school week. Students who do not drive or who use the car only on weekends have the best grades, while those who drive two to four school days a week have significantly poorer grades, the survey proved.

Stone made these recommendations to parents interested in helping their children become good students and good drivers:

1. Make sure that scholarship comes first and driving second.
2. See that they get proper driver training in a high school.
3. Restrict the use of cars to weekends and keep the weekdays for school work. There will be exceptions, but this is a good basic approach.
4. Don't permit a teenager to have a part-time job just to pay for a car or to support one.
5. Keep the keys in your own pocket and lend the car only under proper circumstances.

It's up to the parents to keep cars and school work in their proper perspective and to provide the guidance and example in use of the car," the business leader added.

BLINKIN' BABIES

NEW YORK (AP) — An unborn baby blinks his eyes and moves his eyelids three months before birth, reports Dr. Alden N. Haffner, optometric consultant to the Society for Visual Care.

The society recommends thorough professional eye examinations for children when they are three years old.

Ann Landers

Propositions Many But Jobs Are Few

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a widow who moved to California from a Southern state. Yesterday I decided to take a stroll in the garden area where the ladies who live in this complex sit and visit. I was greeted warmly by five dowager types, three with blue hair and two with lavender. The two lavenders were somewhat silent. I introduced myself, we exchanged pleasantries, but I had the uncomfortable feeling that they were looking me over.

After about 15 minutes I rose to leave. One of the lavender-haired ladies smiled sweetly and said, "We have a few rules here. No one is allowed to talk about aches, pains, operations or illness." Before I could respond, she continued, "Also, we do not talk about politics, religion, clothing styles, inflation, Vietnam, our families, or our finances." It sounded as if she had memorized the list. I was stunned and did not reply. What do you think about such rules, Ann? I am completely mystified.--Newcomer.

Dear New: Looks like the only two subjects left open to the girls is sex and baseball scores. Try em and let me know how you make out.

Dear Ann Landers: This might not sound like an important problem to you, but it is driving me nuts. To put it in a few words--what can be done about people who have a lot of nerve and no common sense?

I sell auto license plates in Florida. People I hardly know ask me to get their plates so they won't have to stand in line. Last week three casual acquaintances came to my home with their money and registration blanks. One woman– a college graduate– –asked me to help her fill out the form. SHE COULDN'T UNDERSTAND IT!

This morning a distant relative showed up while I was having breakfast. I asked him why he didn't bring the stuff to the office. He said, "The parking around there is rough." What do you think about a jerk who wouldn't walk a few blocks but he thinks nothing of interrupting my breakfast?

Please print this. Everyone around here reads your column. Maybe if they see themselves they will take the hint and leave me alone next year. –Pain in the neck in Florida.

Dear Pain: Here it is, but don't bet the rent, Lady. The people with unlimited gall are invariably the most insensitive. If you want these clods to leave you alone you'll have to come right out and tell them so.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a very good secretary who happens to be "between engagements" at the moment. Things are not good in Detroit. I decided to run an ad in this newspaper under Situations Wanted Female. It occurred to me that if I framed something a little off-beat, I'd do better. This is the way my ad read: "Happiness is being a very good secretary, $150 a week."

I spent the last five days answering this crazy telephone. The men who are calling couldn't care less about my secretarial qualifications. They want to know my dimensions and would like to meet me for a drink. I have had seventeen propositions but not one legitimate job offer.

This has taught me a lesson I shall never forget. It doesn't pay to try to be cute when dealing with the public. This world is full of evil-minded creeps, lechers and dirty old men. Just sign me --I'll Starve to Death First

Dear S.T.D.: So what's new?

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage-- What to Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your news-paper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Wives Urged to Familiarize Selves With Family Finances

ST. LOUIS— A wife's ignorance of the family's financial situation can lead to serious complications in the event of her husband's death, according to James B. Porter, president of the Missouri Society of Certified Public Accountants.

He advises wives to look into arrangements made for their future, citing statistics showing that, on the average, women live five years longer than men; and also that most wives are younger than their husbands.

"These facts," Mr. Porter says, "support the point that a woman, likely to outlive her husband, should acquaint herself with family finances and prospects for survivors in the event of the breadwinner's death."

He poses some questions a wife can ask herself to test her knowledgability about a situation she is likely some day to face:

Should your husband die, where would you look for his will, stock certificates, insurance policies and other valuable papers?

Do you have a list of his holdings? What about employee benefits or pension plans at his place of employment? Would you be eligible for social security benefits?

In what banks does he have deposits? How would you gain access to safe deposit boxes?

Would the mortgage on your home have to be paid or is it covered by mortgage insurance?

Mr. Porter advises wives who can't answer such questions to ask their husbands for the information. His advice to men is that, while it is admirable to make adequate provision for one's family, it is imperative that the wife be informed of these arrangements. Otherwise, much of the benefit of the financial planning may be lost.

Risco Teachers Honored

RISCO — Kathryn Fortner, remedial reading teacher, and Amy Sexton, sixth grade teacher, have been selected leaders of elementary education for 1971, according to Jim Dortch, principal, of Risco elementary school.

Nominated earlier this year by the school's administrators, these educators were selected for this national honor because of their professional and civic achievements.

Leaders of American Elementary Education is an annual program. Biographies of those honored are featured in the awards volume, "Leaders of American Elementary Education."

Guidelines for selection include an educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, and civic service and professional recognition.

Local News

Mr. and Mrs. Odie Huckabay and daughter of Sanger, Calif. were house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mayer last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wilcox, 116 E. Center, spent labor day weekend with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Mornin of Theodosia.

On their return home Monday, they stopped at the Hickory House restaurant in Birch Tree, where Mrs. Wilcox fell down the stairs in the restaurant fracturing her left arm. She was taken to the St. Francis Hospital in Mountain View where her arm was placed in a cast. She was then released.

Missouri Health Council Will Meet in Jefferson City

ST. LOUIS -- The Missouri Health Council, a voluntary group representing over thirty official and voluntary agencies from throughout the state will hold its annual meeting and conference at the Ramada Inn in Jefferson, City on September 17 with registration beginning at 9:00 a.m.

During the morning session, representatives of the Missouri Hospital Association will explain their Health Careers program, being carried on in the high schools of the state. They will take those in attendance back to the days when they were a Junior or Senior in high school, trying to decide what they should do with their life and lead them in the direction they should have gone.

Rod G. Gelatt, Assistant Professor of Journalism, University of Missouri will be the guest speaker at the luncheon hour. Newsman Gelatt will bring words of advice from his years of experience that will be of value to anyone in the health field.

In days of great health needs and various groups placing efforts in many fields of endeavor, the Missouri Health Council is fortunate to be able to bring together people from the Regional Office of the United States Department of Health Education and Welfare, the state office of Comprehensive Health Planning, the Mid -America comperhensive Health Planning Agency in Kansas City and the Northesast Missouri Comprehensive Health Planning Group of Kirksville to talk about the Missions, Goals and Objectives of Comprehensive Health Planning. This group was placed on the program in order that all might have a better understanding of federal, state and local health planning.

This meetin is open to anyone affiliated with a health agency or organization

Gridiron Predictions

By RON JAYNES

Another big gridiron season swings into action throughout Southeast Missouri tonight with 13 games scheduled.

As in previous seasons I'll try and give you an insight as to how the games will turn out. Even though we are a long way off at times, it's fun to try.

Before I call the winners in tonight's action, I'd like to invite all you 'gridiron ' fans who'd like to try your luck with us to send in your predictions for next week so they will reach us by Thursday morning.

Here goes —

Mayfield, Ky. at Sikeston -- The Cardinals aren't the team the Big Red has faced in years past, but with the experience they have to be favored ... But we'll stick our necks out and give the Dogs the edge ... SHS 17, Mayfield 14. Come on Dogs.

Charleston at Hayti -- This should be a real test for both clubs ... The Bluejays are favored by most, but don't count the Indians out ... CHS 21, Hayti 13.

Kennett at Malden -- Add number 27 ... Is about all we can say for the Indians in this battle ... 27 straight defeats for the Tribe ... Malden is loaded for the Indians ... Greenwave 42, Kennett 14.

Glendale at Poplar Bluff -- J. B. Hayes will take the Southeast Missouri individual scoring lead in this battle ... Let's say three touchdowns for the talented junior ... and PB 35, Glendale 13.

Caruthersville at Humbolt, Tenn. -- This is a tricky one for us... We know nothing about Humbolt ... but do know the Tigers are loaded ... We'll stick with our SEMO neighbors... CHS 21, Humbolt 14,

Valle at Chaffee -- I always get a couple of goodies like this one ... One team with Valle -- 20-13.

East Prairie at Scott City -- This should be a fairly well matched battle, but the Eagles depth will prevail. EPHS 21, I-SC 14.

St. Vincent at Portageville -- Coach Jim McKay's gridders have picked on one of the Lead Belts better clubs ... This should be interesting for both clubs ... How about St. Vincent by one -- 14-13.

Gideon at South Pemiscot -- The winner of this battle will take the lead in the Bootheel league race ... Gideon is our pick - GHS 13, S. Pem. 6.

Delta C-7 at Doniphan -- The Chargers will surely win ... Its the Dons first varsity season ... but don't bet on it ... A close battle with C-7 losing... Don 20-14.

SHS At Disadvantage

Optimism, enthusiasm and determination were evident Thursday as the Sikeston high school Bulldog football team held a light workout in preparation for its season opener at Public School Stadium tonight against Mayfield, Ky.

The team is healthy and in high spirits as it heads into one of the school's toughest schedules, having defeated Fairly high of Memphis and St. Louis Maplewood as opponents besides their always tough league rivals.

The 1971 Bulldogs follow the schools worst (1-8-0) record in history and have set their number one goal to erase that memory and claim the school's first league title since 1968.

Coach Bill Friday's crew will be at a disadvantage when they take the field tonight. Mayfield will be playing its third regular season game and fifth game including two scrimmages.

Mayfield chalked up its first victory of the season last Friday when it beat Caldwell County, 21-13, after playing to a scoreless standoff with Owensboro in its season opener. In pre-season action the Cards beat Paris, Tenn. and Lost to Jackson, Tenn.

But the big Red come off a 9-1 season with outstanding personnel.

Included in that record was a 48-19 victory over the Bulldogs.

The Cardinals were one of the top offensive teams in Kentucky last season with an better than 48-point per-game mark.

Gone from that high scoring offensive machine is all-state and all-american quarterback Joe Ford. He wil be heading the forces at Memphis State down the field.

David Fowler, the sure handed-fleet footed end of the Cards '70 corps, has moved to quarterback this season. The big Red is not rated in the Western Kentucky polls this season after having been among the top three last season. It is rated on adequate passing team but it stays on the ground mostly.

Sikeston high will go with two platoons tonight.

Bulldog Starting Assignments

Coach Friday expects Poplar Bluff to be the best team in the conference along with Cape Girardeau Central close behind and Perryville.

The probable starting lineup will be on Offense;

The town and country suit from Cricketeer is tailored in an all wool town worsted in patterns and colorings that look like a weekend in the country. The styling is casual with button flap pockets, back gussets, a half-belt and a high center vent. It's an urbane look with an old-fashioned country price.

ANOTHER FIRST FOR NO. 1:

Venturi Gets Starting Call From Onofrio

KANSAS CITY (AP) The house of midnight strikes for five Big Eight Conference football teams Saturday and a sixth Saturday night

Nebraska, Missouri, Oklahoma State, Kansas and Kansas State raise the curtain on their 1971 campaigns, all against non-conferences foes, on their home fields. Colorado faces Louisiana State at Baton Rouge, La., under the lights.

Nebraska, the defending national champion and rated No.2 behind Notre Dame in the preseason poll, faces Oregon. The Missouri Tigers, playing under new head Coach Al Onofrio, are hosts to Stanford, the Rose Bowl champion. Oklahoma State loaded with sophomores, entertains Mississippi State.

The Kansas Jayhawks, hoping to make Don Fambrough's debut as head coach a rousing success, meet Washington State. Kansas State, a Big Eight Darkhorse, will meet Utah State.

The Oklahoma Sooners and Oklahoma State Cyclones won't get into competition until Sept. 18 when the Sooners open against Southern Methodist and the Cyclones against Idaho.

Bob Devaney, the Nebraska coach who will dip into his pool of talented quarterbacks and tap Jerry Tagge to direct the Cornhuskers against the Ducks from the Pacific -8 Conference. If Tagge falters, senior Van Brownson, who alternated with Tagge last year, will take over. Nebraska will throw some fine runners against Oregon, including Jeff Kinney and Johnny Rodgers.

Devaney, irked at the Cornhuskers' recent practice session says, "We have a long way to go. We have been disappointing on the defense. The team running Oregon plays has been making for too much yardage.

"It may be that there is complacency amoung your people. They have received too much publicity. They need to make up."

Missouri will be the underdog in its test with Stanford. The Tigers are expected to be strong on defense and weak on offense. Onofrio has converted Mike Fink from defense to slot-back in an effort to bolster the offense.

John Venturi, a junior with little experience, will get the quarter- back nod over veterans Mike Farmer and Chuck Roper. Junior college transfer Don Johnson will play fullback. Sophomore Chuck Link will be the tailback, replacing injured Jack Bastable. "It's the best we've got to put in there," says Onofrio, "and I'm not worried about it."

Tony Pounds, last year's No. 2 passer in the Big Eight, apparently will start at quarterback for Oklahoma State over sophomore Brent Blackman. The Cowboys' offensive line is 22 pounds per man heavier than last year. Dickie Graham, an elusive split end, could prove the difference against Mississippi State; "We threw a little more last year than we wanted to," Cowboy Coach Floyd Gass says; "We will do more running this season. We are young but we have more depth and size than a year ago."

Kansas has a king -sized problem, that of defense, a category in which the Jayhawks were 9th worst in the Big Eight in 1970. Fambrough's defense will get a fair test against Washington State since theCougars have a potent offense. Kansas outscored the Cougars last year '48-31.

Dan Heck will do the Kansas quarterbacking. Steve Conley and Jerome Nelloms, both running backs, will try to take up the slack left by the graduation of John Riggins, the league's leading rusher in 1970.

Fambrough thinks Washington State is "50 per cent better than last year. I just hope they don't score on us that way this season. If they do, we're in trouble."

Dennis Morrision, with little varsity experience, will start at quarterback for Kansas State, whose great Lynn Dickey is no longer on the scene.

Coach Vince Gibson will take the wraps off of sophomore Isaac Jackson, a shy appearing halfback who as a high school junior was featured in a national television special entitled, "See Isaac Run."

"We've got a lot of players who haven't played a lot," Gibson noted. "We're quite distitute. We've got some good football players and the best young backs since I've been at Kansas State. We'll be a good, sound offensive team and pretty sound defensive and we'll be decent."

Hart No. 1

ST. LOUIS (AP) Jim Hart draws the quarterbacking job as the St. Louis Cardinals wind up their preseason National Football League campaign in hosts tonight to the Cleveland Browns.

The 29-year-old Hart, sorely challenged for the position through four previous exhibitions, won out by little more than an eyelash over 29-year-old Pete Beathard.

Hart has completed 33 of 63 passes for 477 yards and a touchdown, quarterbacking the Cardinals to a 16-14 edge over the Houston Oilers for their only preseason win.

Since then he's shared the duty with Beathard, for whom the Cards traded Charley Johnson to Houston in 1970. Beathard's chart is 29 to 57 in passing for 401 yards and three touchdowns.

"I'll take the responsibility for naming the starter and, if necessary, replacing him," said first-season St. Louis coach Bob Hollway, whose Cardinals are 1-2-1.

Hart called signals from start to finish of the Cards' 8-5-1 campaign last fall, with Beathard throwing but 17 passes.

"Both men have done a good job," Hollway said. "It's my judgement that Jim is the best man to start at this time."

The Browns' 30-yearold Bill Nelson will be the opposing quarterback, having directed Cleveland to a 30-7 triumph over the New York Giants last weekend.

Doubtful participants for Cleveland, however, are wide receiver Gary Collins and running back Bo Scott, both nursing bruised ribs. Tackle Dick Shafrath won't play because of injury.

Hollway has tabbed No. 2 draft choice Dan Dierdorf for a starting guard position and will give rookie defensive end Ron Yankowski a start because of injury to defensive tackle Bob Rowe.

The Cardinals and Browns, tabbed also-rans in the National and American conferences, respectively, have both lost close preseason games, Cleveland's record is 1-4.

Dodgers Win 4th Straight

"I figured they'd be looking for fast balls," Jim Palmer surmised, "That's why I kept going with my breaking pitches."

Baltimore's big right - hander was right -- and his strategy paid off handsomely as he pitched out of a seventh inning jam, then went on to record a six - hitter for his 10th victory of the season with a 4-2 triumph over the Washington Senators Thursday night.

In the only other two games on the American League schedule, California edged Milwaukee in 12 innings and Boston erupted for seven eighth - inning runs to wallop Detroit 12-6.

In the lone National League contest, Los Angeles won its fourth straight game and ninth in 11 with a 3-2 squeaker over San Diego.

A walk, a single and a wild pitch put two runners in scoring position with one out and brought up the potential tying run by Frank Howard.

"With Palmer, I always have to look for fast balls," Howard recalled. "So he puts three curves over, right where he wants 'em,

"It was just a case of 'take a hike.' I couldn't have hit those hooks with two bats. That was the game right there."

Actually it wasn't right at that moment. It was a few minutes later, though, when Palmer also caught a pinch - hitter Jeff Burroughs looking, also with a curve.

Palmer also scored a run for the Birds, singling to lead off in third inning and later coming in on Boog Powell's sacrifice fly.

The Angels, held hitless for seven innings by rookie Bill Parsons, tied the Brewers in the bottom of the ninth on a pair of walks and Mickey Rivers' triple.

Luis Aparicio drove in five runs for the Red Sox with three singles and his fourth home run of the year and Billy Conigliaro also homered for the winners while Dalton Jones had one for the Tigers,

Richie Allen's game tying double triggered the Dodgers' three - run rally in the sixth inning against Ike Brown that gave Al Downing his 18th victory and boosted Los Angeles within 4½ games of idle

FOOTBALL PLAYOFF INFORMATION

The 1971 Football Playoff Manual was mailed to all football member schools in August. We ask that each school playing football check and make sure that they have received a copy of this Football Playoff Manual.

The district assignments for the 1971 football playoffs to be held in November, are listed in the back of the Football Playoff Manual. Assignments of schools to classes have been made on the basis of enrollment as follows:

Class	Enrollment
A	250 & under
AA	251-500
AAAA	1201 & above

A minimum of seven games must be played by and including Sunday, November 14. The football data card provided must be filed postmarked immediately following the game played on or immediately before November 7. All schools playing 11-man football must file this card, which is needed to determine the ratings for all teams that qualify. Schools playing on November 14 are to send a telegram giving the results of their games. No games scheduled after September 1, 1971 may be considered in determining a school's ratings for the playoffs. However all games scheduled after this date should be reported to the MSHSAA Office.

One team will be selected from each district (There will be different districts for different classes.) All games played through November 14 shall be used in determining a school's rating. Games played after that date will not affect a school's ranking in the selection for the playoff games.

A first division team is one that has won more than 50% of its games. For example. (5-4-0); (5-3-1), etc. A second division team is one that has won as many games as it has lost or has won more than it has lost, but has not won more than 50% of its games. For example. (4-2-3), (4-4-1), etc. A third division team is one which has won fewer games than it has lost. For example, (3-4-1); (2-3-4), etc.

	1st Division	2nd Division	3rd Division
Victory over	24	16	8
Tied with	12	8	4
Lost to	6	4	2

For a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a one higher classification add one point for a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a one lower classification subtract ½ point.

For a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a two higher classification add one point for a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a two lower classification subtract one point.

For a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a three higher classification add 1½ points for a victory over, tie with, or loss to a team in a three lower classification subtract 1½ points.

A team's rating will be determined by dividing the total number of points earned from all games played through November 14 by the number of games played through that date. Teams will be selected from these ratings. If two or more teams finish with identical ratings and they have played each other, the winning team shall be ranked above the teams with identical ratings that it has defeated. If they played and tied each other, or they did not compete, then the representatives will be determined by totaling the wins and losses of their opponents and the one competing against the higher percentage of total wins will be selected. If the tie is not broken in this manner, the team whose opponents have earned the greatest number of rating points under the above shall be the higher ranking team.

If a tie is not broken under the steps above, it will be resolved by flipping a coin to determine the team to qualify.

The score of a game will not affect the number of points a team receives for a particular game. That is, a team winning 7-6 will receive the same number of points as it would by beating the same team 50-0.

WIDER GOAL POSTS AND SHORTER CLEATS MANDATORY FOR FOOTBALL THIS YEAR

The National Alliances Football Rules Committee adopted two rules changes at its January, 1969, rules meeting that will become mandatory for the first time during the 1971 football season. The first change requires that a goal post be widened to 23' 4" the distance between the uprights above the crossbar is 2'' 4". The other change prohibits the use of shoe cleats longer than ½". The rules committee recognized that both changes would involve expenses for the schools and thus included a provision in the rules that they would not become mandatory until the 1971 season.

The specifications for the goal post crossbar provides that it shall be 23' 4" long and 10' above the ground measured from the base of each upright to the top of the crossbar at its intersection. If a single pedestal goal is used, measurements shall be made from each end of the crossbar perpendicular to the ground. If the goal has been altered by lengthening the crossbar and using the previous uprights, the height of the crossbar shall be measured from each end. The distance between the outside edges of the upright and the crossbar shall not exceed 24'. This permits use of an upright with a 4" diameter or width maximum. The uprights shall extend a minimum of 10' above the top of the crossbar

Rule 1-5-3-d prohibits the use of cleats longer than ½". All shoe cleats worn during interscholastic game competition shall meet this criteria. There shall be no exceptions permitted. Research has indicated that the frequency and severity of knee and ankle injuries can be traced to the fact that because the foot is anchored to the ground through the use of the long cleat at the time of impact, injuries occur to the ankle and knee. Experiments prove that when shorter cleats are used, the foot can move and, as a consequence, injuries are reduced and/or they are less severe. Teams which have used shoes with shorter cleats relate there is no principle difference in the players ability to perform. A two year grace period has been provided for athletic goods manufacturers to have time to adapt to the requirement. It is important that coaches check all other game shoes to make sure that the cleats conform to the specifications in the rules book. Officials have been instructed to rigidly enforce this standard and to not permit a player to participate while wearing cleats that are longer than ½ inch.

Clergymen Discuss Their Calling

Ministers Must Shoulder Myriad Burdens Of Others

THE REV. TOM BASS — "It took me six years to learn to say I don't know."

THE REV. J.W. GWIN — "Problems are a way of life for everyone, including ministers."

By JUDY GAZETTE

"The role of the minister is not clearly defined," Don Glover, minister of Shady Acres Church of Christ, said, "but I think it's a combination of being Albert Einstein, Mickey Mantle, Billy Graham and a Boy Scout leader."

Glover and five other Sikeston ministers, questioned about the humanistic feelings and attitudes which they as clergymen experience — but are not always expected to experience — gave answers reflecting both sobriety and humor. None had doubts about his calling, but for different reasons.

The Rev. Joseph Wagner of First United Methodist Church was past 30 when he graduated from Eden Theological Seminary in St. Louis.

"I had always told my family," he said quietly, "that when I decided -- fully decided -- to enter the ministry, I was going to be sure. I taught school for about 10 years before I made my final decision and so you see, I'm fully committed."

The Rev. Wade Paris, Murray Lane Baptist Church, presented a contrast, for he was only 13 when he became conscious of a religious call.

"I say I've been a minister for 23 years," he explained, "although I've been a pastor for only 16 years. But when I was 13, I knew I was going to enter God's work. I thought at first I wanted to be a medical missionary, but in talking to missionaries, I learned that many times their medical duties take them almost entirely away from preaching and teaching, and I felt that preaching was what I needed to do."

The Rev. Tom Bass, pastor of Hunter Memorial First Presbyterian church, was a student at Louisiana Technical college, Ruston, when he reached a career decision, but prior to moving to Sikeston in February, he spent seven months away from the ministry.

"We were living in Cape Girardeau at the time," he said, "when I contrmplated going into another field for a time, but after working as an assistant construction engineer for those months, I got it out of my system."

Demands on a minister come in the form of 70-hour work weeks for some, including hospital visits, funerals, weddings, three sermons per week and counseling sessions, not to mention the fact that he is expected to remain in good spirits, good health and within ready reach by telephone.

For in an age of steadily rising divorce rates, costs of living and crimes, a stock piece of advice is to "see your clergyman." So where, aside from the obvious, does your clergyman go for a sympathetic ear of informal rap session?

How are he and his family affected by such demands?

"I was sort of a pastor's pastor," he explained. "Extreme changes for a minister, such as moving from a large city to a rural area, can pose problems, just as in any other profession, and they need to be talked out. So, as a superintendent, I would counsel those under me -- listen to them. But for me, personally, aside from talking to God, I've found my wife to be the most wonderful listener. You know, it's as though the ministry were her calling, too."

"I think for most ministers," Glover said, "it's not easy to go to another person in the immediate area, like another minister, because we, like others, don't like for someone else to know our weaknesses.

"I have a distinct advantage because I have a brother who is a preacher and when we get together, we share and help each other with problems. My wife is also a very good sounding board, but I don't necessarily think my burdens are hers. I encourage her to be only as active as she wants to be personally because we have a large family.

"But personally, I don't think the ethical demands on a minister are any greater than on you as a newspaperwoman, for instance. You just have to be yourself. It's the only way to have any sanity."

"I go on my knees," the Rev. J. W. Gwin, West End Baptist church said. "The thing is, today, problems are a way of life. No one is without them. The idea is to understand just that and work around them. Take my children, for instance. I know that they make at least two adjustments a day -- major ones. Most people dress up to go out and when they come home, they relax. For my children, it's the other way around. Being a pastor's children, I think they feel they have to dress up to come home."

The Rev. Mr. Bass says that ministers are "geared for output. Others expect guidance from us and interpretation of their problems, but they don't, as a rule, expect us to need human type refreshment. We can sometimes get this sort of input from other clergymen or very close friends -- sometimes from professional seminars."

"I'll tell you, it took me six years to learn to say 'I don't know.' And when I did, it was like being liberated, because you're expected to know the answers to so many things -- even the unknown, sometimes.

"The nicest thing anyone ever does for me is treat me as a person. Everyone treats me as a human being, but it's one thing to be introduced as Rev. Tom Bass, and quite another to be introduced as 'my friend, Tom Bass.' The fact that I am a minister is incidental."

"It's unrealistic for a congregation to put their pastor on a pedestal," the Rev. Mr. Paris remarked. "of course that's the safest, most secure situation to be in for us, because people don't get to know you or your shortcomings, but you can't continue like that.

"I suppose," the Rev. Mr. Paris continued, "if there is some part I like to do least of all, I would have to say counseling, because many times people come to you too late and the sessions are unproductive. Of course, if you do even a little bit of good, it's worth ofit."

"There are usually two schools of thought about preachers," Joe Williams, minister of music and education at First Baptist Church and an ordained preacher, said, "one is that he should remain in the confines of the ecclesiastical order, away from worldly things, and the other is that as Christians, we are all preachers of the gospel and the pastor is no less human than anyone else.

"As for me, I feel that this is the only thing for me to do. Certainly, if we were to consider the amount of time spent in educational preparation and actual working hours, the financial benefits are not equitable with many non- secular jobs, but for us there is compensation money cannot in any way buy.

"I don't think I ever actually turn loose of the plow and look back, but there are times in attempting to do my work, when I look to be sure I've got hold of the right plow. I can do no other work."

Schweitzer Impact

By REV. DAVID POLING

When Erica Anderson dedicated the Albert Schweitzer Friendship House in Great Barrington, Mass., last month, she invited a few friends to attend. Since her remodeled barn-film center can seat only a hundred people, she didn't bother to send announcements and only told "a few friends."

They must have told their friends, for 2,100 people showed up and the cars alone nearly filled a 20-acre pasture next to her house. Good news travels fast and events concerning Albert Schweitzer continue to be popular—and increasing.

After Schweitzer's death in 1965, Miss Anderson decided to establish a library, museum and film center. The result is a total success. For here is one of the best collections of books, manuscripts and printed material by and about Albert Schweitzer. Miss Anderson naturally shows her own films of Schweitzer, many not seen by the general public although her 1960 documentary film won the Academy Award for its category. Evidently, word has gotten around concerning this five-year project—more than 25,000 visitors have stopped off in Great Barrington during the construction period.

Schweitzer continues to attract a crowd. Was it his hospital in Africa, his music at Aspen, Colo., his lectures in Uppsala, Sweden, or his theology that shook Germany? It may be all these things, but one development, one aspect of his life and thought now reaches far beyond his lifetime, racing ahead of 20th-century man—Reverence for Life.

However notable Schweitzer was in other fields, however original or courageous, Reverence for Life is the enduring word and much of the world seems eager to discover the dimensions of such an idea.

Other happenings mark the impact of Schweitzer on our time.

- In East Germany, an anthology of Schweitzer's writings has just been published by a Marxist press. The early anti-imperialist, anti-colonialist stance of Schweitzer may be the reason for their interest.
- Robert Payne, author and lecturer on Schweitzer, has recently announced the possibility of a feature film. Other Hollywood producers, like William Graf (just completed "African Elephant") are actively considering film treatment of the Man from Lambarene.
- In Japan, Schweitzer runs a close second to Ghandi as the most popular non-Japanese author among schoolchildren. His world radio broadcasts in opposition to atomic bomb testing stirred the people of Japan. Reverence for Life is a powerful theme among Buddhists.
- Four countries have issued stamps commemorating Schweitzer's life and work. Gabon issued not only stamps but produced gold coins popular with collectors.
- In Gunsbach, Germany, Schweitzer's birthplace, a a new museum is sorting through his vast correspondence, establishing archives for scholars, students and interested followers of his work.
- Schweitzer posters and African scenes and "Friendship Cards" have been produced by Schweitzer World, Box 208, Pleasantville, N.Y. 10570, incorporating some of Erica Anderson's classic photography of the philosopher.

Revival services began Wednesday night and will continue each night at 7:30 p.m. through Sept. 19 at Christ Gospel Church, 717 Kendall St., under the leadership of Evangelists Johnny and Tressie Goetz, formerly of Sikeston, and Pastor Jerry Bachelder.

The Rev. Mr. Goetz is a graduate of Kelly high school of Benton and Mrs. Goetz is a graduate of Sikeston high school. Both are graduates of the Christ Gospel Bible Institute in Jeffersonville, Ind.

Before entering full - time evangelism, the Rev. Mr. Goetz pastored for three years in Evansville, Ind.

During the revival period, the Rev. Sister B.R. Hicks of Jeffersonville, Ind., founder and director of Christ Gospel Churches International, will join the Rev. Mr. Goetz for a two - day convention here Wednesday and Thursday.

Evening Course Offered

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Baptist Student Center is offering a free, non - credit evening course in The Life of Christ this fall to lay church leaders and pastors who desire training for more effective service.

The first class session will meet Thursday, Sept. 16, at 7 p.m. Students may enroll at that time. Classes will meet each Thursday evening of the first semester from 7 until 9 p.m. The course will be taught by Dr. Thomas S. Messer, professor of the chair of Bible.

Students are encouraged to bring their own New Testaments in their favorite translation. Textbooks will be available for those who wish to purchase them.

This week's Uniform INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Dr. William H. Taft

Scriptures:
Exodus 33 12-23: Job 11 7-9; 37:23-24; Isaiah 40: 18-26 Romans 11: 33-36

GOD TRANSCENDS OUR UNDERSTANDING

Based on outlines prepared by the Department of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., and used by permission.)

Our first lesson in this series about God makes it clear that we cannot escape questions about Him.

As Jean Jacque Rousseau once said, "If there wasn't a God, we would have to invent one to keep people sane." "Frequently the more one studies such a question the more questions he raises.

What are our priorities in our daily thoughts? What ideas have occupied our thinking for the past week? Some think of their families, their children, their household problems, their jobs.

Others think of the world's difficulties, the wars, the prisoners held by the enemy, the economic and political controversies.

How many place God on their list? How many of these daily problems will ever be solved without God's help.

Our lesson recognizes that "human minds cannot take all of God into their understanding." Still we seek significant incidents to restore and build our faith.

Moses followed God's instructions while he continually wanted to know about Him. When Moses asked God to show him His glory, he was told, "My face you cannot see, for no mortal man may see me and live."

Why didn't God want to show His face? Some believe it was man's lack of capacity in his human state to fully comprehend God.

For example, how does one picture God in his own mind? Some see him as white, some as black, some as old, some as ageless. To some He is a celestial Santa Claus. Most of us cannot create an image of Him in our minds.

Isaiah raised a similar question when he asked, "What likeness will you find for God or what form to resemble His? Again, we are told that "He stretches out the skies like a curtain, He spreads them out like a tent to live in,"

In the New Testament it is "Who knows the mind of the Lord?" No one can fathom the mystery of God, Job tells us. Paul thought His wisdom, knowledge and judgement beyond the powers of anyone to understand.

One can spend an eternity seeking to know about God. Today, probably more than ever before, people are seeking God in nature.

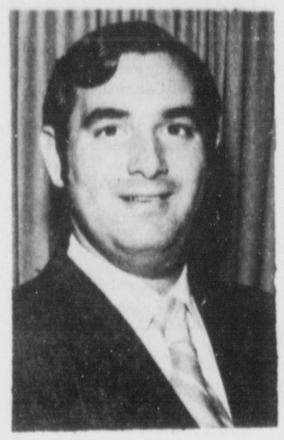

In many passages form the Bible we learn of God's concern for the flowers and the animals. And through these elements we better comprehend Him.

The Koran of Islam says "If all the trees on earth were pens and if there were seven oceans full of ink, they could not suffice to describe the wonders of the Almighty."

Where do you find God? Some find him in outerspace, others find HIm in the privacy of their own surroundings. Some, unfortunately, never find Him.

Probably our title for this lesson presents an impossible solution. He is beyond the world yet He is in this world; He is beyond our understanding and comprehension, yet we never cease to want to learn more about Him.

Teen Challenge Worker First Assembly Speaker

Steve Bursey

Speaking in the 7 p.m. service Sunday at First Assembly of God Church, 306 South Kingshighway, will be Steven Bursey, field representative for the Mid-America Teen Challenge Center in Cape Girardeau.

Along with Bursey, several boys from the training center will attend the service as guests, according to the Rev. T. A. McDonough, pastor. The center seeks to help and rehabilitate teenagers with drug problems.

Bursey was born and reared in New York City. His parents were working middle class Jews. In junior high school he started smoking marijuana. A few months later he was introduced to the drug heroin. After that his life was one of crime, jails, hospitals, and addiction.

A family doctor told Bursey that the only way out was to put a gun to his head and pull the trigger. Then one day he heard about a place called Teen Challenge, a drug rehabilitation center in Brooklyn. He went there to please his mother and satisfy his own curiosity.

There he was confronted by Don Wilkerson, the brother of David Wilkerson, author of "The Cross and the Switchblade" and founder of Teen Challenge.

Bursey was surprised when they opened a Bible and started talking about God and faith.

After a few days there he stole money and left. Under the influence of heroin that night Steve began to think about all the places he had been and all the things he had tried to get off drugs.

He went back to Teen Challenge and found help through his faith in Christ, and now has completed Central Bible college, Springfield, with a bachelor of arts in Bible.

Q—In religious art, what does the crown and scepter signify?

The POWER of FAITH

BY WOODI ISHMAEL

"On Earth join all ye creatures to extol Him first, Him last, Him midst, and without end." Paradise Lost, Book 5.

John Milton spent his life extolling God in his poetry, prose and actions. He was undoubtedly the most devout of all the great English poets.

His parents wanted him to become a clergyman but his brilliant mind led into the field of writing. He was devoted to Puritanism and Oliver Cromwell, and with his pen he attacked their enemies in his many pamphlets on the subject. When Cromwell, leader of the Puritans, formed the Commonwealth in 1649 Milton held a secretarial post in the government. When Cromwell died in 1658 Milton narrowly escaped being executed as a supporter of the Puritans. His fame as a poet probably saved him.

In later life Milton went blind but continued to write some of his greatest poems, including "Paradise Lost." He was a deeply spiritual man. He studied the Bible intensely and based his faith upon the word of the Bible. He believed that the Bible was the cornerstone of faith and that all should know it well.

Governors Have Money on Mind

By Editorial Research Reports

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — The 63rd annual National Governors Conference opens Thursday in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

A few of the nation's 50 governors may go to their annual conference wondering why they ever asked for the job in the first place. To be a governor, they will probably mutter, is to get it from all sides.

The four - day conference in San Juan will give them a brief but lavish opportunity to get away from the state house crunch. Formal dinners, garden buffet lunches and a cello concert by Pablo Casals may help convience some of them that the job has a few redeeming perquisites.

Sixteen of the governors are new this year, reflecting the voter discontent that swept seven incumbents out of office in the 1970 elections. All seven defeated incumbents were Republicans, helping the Democrats to control 29 statehouses in 1971, compared with only 18 a year ago.

It hasn't taken the new governors long to learn the basic fact of gubernatorial life: there isn't enough money to go around. The recession has made taxpayers more reluctant than usual to finance statewide social programs. But it hasn't reduced demands for those services, especially from cash - starved cities. Some governors are having to choose between a passive administration with curtailed services at low cost and an activist administration financed over the objections of taxpayers and politicians alike.

In Pennsylvania, Democrat Milton J. Shapp took office this January following a campaign in which he promised to combine a state income tax with relief for low - income citizens. After two months of haggling, the legislature passed a bill in March establishing a 3.5 per cent tax with exemptions for many of the poor.

But the state supreme court ruled the plan unconstitutional, insisting it violated a requirement of uniformity. Shapp had to start all over again, and it was Aug. 28 before the legislature approved a flat rate 2.3 per cent personal income tax, narrowly averting bankruptcy.

Ohio's John J. Gilligan, also a freshman Democrat, campaigned for governor by promising to depart from the previous administration's tight - fisted approach that kept the state 45th in taxes per capita. The Republican legislature looked unfavorably on Gilligan's plans for corporate and personal income taxes to finance new spending. By late August the final tax and budget package still had not reached the governor's desk, and Gilligan had threatened to lay off 3,000 state employees.

Other freshman governors have had similar problems. Connecticut's Thomas J. Meskill (R) vetoed an unpopular state income tax, then approved a less lucrative sales tax boost and cut state services by nearly $100 million to balance the budget. Florida's Reubin Askew (D) persuaded the legislature to place a corporate profits tax question on the November ballot, and is touring the state to drum up support.

The program of the Puerto Rico conference will stray far from tax matters to include topics like health care, penal reform, and no- fault auto insurance. But odds are that most of the nation.s governors will have money on the mind, especially President Nixon's decision to postpone revenue sharing with the states.

Malta And Iceland Wave Big Sticks

By Editorial Research Reports

LONDON-- Malta and Iceland are two tight little islands that are going all out to annoy the NATO alliance. No one knows how seriously to take the ultimatums and brinksmanship of their newly elected left-wing governments. However, if they stick to their guns, the United States may have to quit the Keflavik air base in Iceland. And Britain would have to find new ports of call for its ships and planes in the Mediterranean.

Iceland is by far the most important of the two bases. The Economist calls it the "turnstile of the North Atlantic." From Keflavik, the United States keeps track of Soviet fleet and aircraft movements on the Kola Peninsula and in the Arctic Ocean. Elections in Iceland last June ended a 12-year period of relative political stability. The new colition government announced on July 15 that it wanted to renegotiate Iceland's 1951 defense agreement with the United States.

When the flamboyant Dominic Mintoff became Prime Minister of Malta on June 16, with only a one-man majority in the new Parliament, he said that the defense agreement between Britain and Malta was "no longer in being." Mintoff also set his sights on evicting a NATO naval headquarters on the island. On Aug. 20 it was announced that the NATO facility will be moved to the bigger NATO headquarters in Naples. Meanwhile, Mintoff continues to negotiate with the British for a higher payment for continued presense of a British air base and harbor rights.

Malta's Mintoff, who is an Oxford graduate, tried 16 years ago as prime minister of the then colony of Malta to integrate the islands into the United Kingdom. The British were immensely relieved when he gave them a way out by settling for financial aid. Subsequently Mintoff tried to obtain NATO membership,then associate status, and finally the status of "an observer" -- only to be turned down each time.

As the Economist observed, NATO wanted a presence on Malta primarily to keep the Russian air and naval forces out. However, "they would rather lump it than pay a grossly excessive amount of money for a base of only marginal value." Although the Russian Ambassador, Mikhail Smirnovsky, has been courting Mintoff, the Kremlin does not feel it owes the Maltese a living.

The traditionally warm Anglo-Maltese relationship has floundered on Mintoff's demands. If Britain pulled out, 9,000 Maltese would immediatley lose their jobs and Mintoff could lose his majority. British Defense Minister, Lord Carrington, said after visiting Malta that, "This is not a matter of life and death. But I think both countries would be the loser and I think Malta would be a bigger loser."

Iceland, unlike Malta, does not want cash. Instead, it appears ready to defer the question of bases to the dispute over fishing waters. However, the two Communists in the cabinet object to the presence of 3,700 American troops. In view of the fact that Iceland has no armed forces, her only contribution to NATO defense over the past two decades has been her tolerance of the presence of American troops.

Iceland's defense treaty with the United States in 1951 allowed six months notice of withdrawal to be given by either side and then a further 12 months before the actual withdrawal had to take place. During the last cirsis, in 1956, negotiations over the base were allowed to drag on until the Soviet invasion of Hungary changed public opinion in Reykjavik. The hope is that something will happen to divert the Icelandic cabinet from its course. In the meantime, of course, the mice will roar.

Wallhausen Advisor To State Library

JEFFERSON CITY — Arthur Wallhausen Jr., editor of the Charleston Enterprise - Courier, was one of 24 Missourians named by the Missouri State Library Commission to serve on its advisory committee.

The committee will assist the commission and the state library staff in the development of plans for future library development in the state.

1,819 Enrolll At Malden

MALDEN — Malden R-1 Schools showed a total enrollment of 1,819 students at the end of the first week of the 1971-72 school term. The figure does not include the 160 students enrolled in the Tri - County Trade School, of which 59 of the students are Malden residents.

There are 14 grades (or classes) within the three divisions of the Malden R-1 Schools, ranging from Kindergarten to the 12th Grade. The 6th Grade has the highest enrollment with 181 students; and the Special Education Class is the smallest with a total of 19 students.

The enrollment by grades is:

Kindergarten, 137; Special Education, 19; 1st Grade, 136; 2nd Grade, 170; 3rd Grade, 125; 4th Grade, 134; 5th Grade, 149; 6th Grade, 181; 7th Grade, 122; 8th Grade, 142; 9th Grade, 144; 10th Grade, 138; 11th, 12th Grades, 111 each.

New School Busses Will Ease Crowding

A transportation problem that plagued the opening session of the public schools may be near an end according to Superintendent of Schools Sam Harbin.

Harbin said this morning that route problems and overcrowding existed in initial busing. But the bulk of the problems have been "worked out".

The problems centered around rural busing routes, where students remained on buses for extended periods because of a bus ahortage. Some of the city buses also were overcrowded, Harbin said.

Four new buses, scheduled to arrive in late November, will eliminate most of the problems, Harbin said. The new vehicles will include two 72-passenger buses, one conventional bus, and a 12 passenger carryall. The carryall is earmarked for transportation to school activities.

When the new buses arrive, Harbin said, one existing bus will be used for "stand-by purposes."

An new air conditioning unit at Lee Hunter elementary school should be in operation within the month. Matthews elementary junior high, Morehouse, and kindergarten do not have air conditioning.

Fraudulent Calls Will Be Investigated

New procedures to bring fast detection and follow up of fraudulent long distance calls will protect telephone customers who ultimately pay the bill, according to Mark Rudloff, Southwestern Bell manager.

"There is no such thing as a free long distance call," Rudloff said. "All states have laws against fraudulent telephone calls and we are joining other Bell System companies in a drive to deter abuse of long distance service."

Rudloff said that the new process minimizes delay between the time the call is made and discovery of fraud.

"For example, if a person makes a call using a non-existent credit card number we are able to spot it through daily processing of long distance message tickets which operators fill out on each call," he said.

"When such a fraud is discovered," Rudloff said, "a member of the company's security organization will personally visit the recipient of the call to gain informaiton about the offender for possible court action."

The systemwide effort is expected to stem the tide of growing revenue losses from fraudulent use of the service.

"Across the country," Rudloff said, "underground groups, petty cheaters and large illegal operators are adding to the $34 million that the Bell System estimates it may lose this year from toll fraud. That's up from $8 million in 1968."

"We are obligated to our customers and to the communities we serve to prosecute those who attempt this type of criminal activity," he said. "Increased revenues accounted for as a result of savings on our fraud losses can be better used to improve telephone service."

Van Gogh Letters Reveal Torment

VAN GOGH'S "DIARY": The Artist's Life in His Own Words and Art. Edited by Jan Hulsker. William Morrow. $12.50.

This is a "diary" in the sense that it reconstructs Van Gogh's own written thoughts during the period that he was an artist, from 1881 to 1890.

There are excerpts from the hundreds of letters that Van Gogh wrote to his younger brother Theo (who periodically gave him enough money to live on), his parents and some of his artist friends.

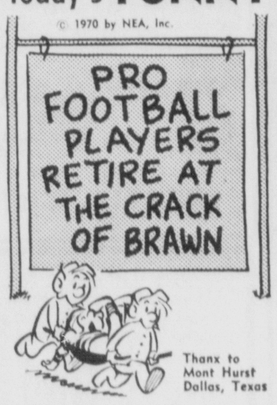

In addition it is evident that many of the artist's drawings, watercolors and paintings reflect his reactions to the places and people around him, and the illustrations are keyed to his running comment on his works in progress.

At the back of the book is a biographical summary about Van Gogh's years before 1881, when at the age of 27 he began his career as an artist. Some readers may want to absorb this background before reading the main text. There are 19 color plates and 260 illustrations in black and white.

From these Van Gogh letters come many intimate expressions of the artist's tortured battle to create his own view of the world; his disappointment over the fact his works did not sell (in the past two years two of his paintings have been auctioned for $1.3 million and $1.2 million); his emotional, physical and mental problems, which led to his early death, and his sometimes desperate attempts to live up to the esthetic goals in which he believed. This book should serve as a companion volume to whatever biographical or critical studies the reader may want to consult.

Hannibal, a Carthaginian general, led an army against the Romans in 218 B.C. He successfully marched his army, including about 40 elephants, from Africa across the Alps, The World Almanac says. Hannibal reached Rome after 16 years of fighting but was called home after Publius Scipio invaded Carthage. Reluctantly Hannibal left Italy and was defeated by Scipio at Zama.

Girl Is A Karate Star

By THOMAS P. MILLER
Reading Eagle Staff Writer

READING, Pa. (AP)—In these liberated 70s it is no surprise to find a girl like Kim Fritz with two four-foot-high trophies and over 40 other awards, for — of all things — her karate talents.

In fact Kim, a recent high school graduate, is the No. 1 karate competitor in the United States, and she only began studying karate two years ago. She wanted a little knowledge of self-defense, but found she loved it.

Her first competition came after three months of training. At first she hesitated to compete in the rough New York International because she was afraid of getting hurt. She does not hesitate to say, "I don't like pain."

Her efforts resulted in her taking second place in kata, which is the competition for form, and fourth place in free-sparring. Since that first foray into karate contests, she has amassed 45 trophies. She holds a first degree brown belt, too.

In this "age of the body," as Kim puts it, karate develops a tremendous amount of mental as well as physical awareness and discipline. Balance and mind-over-matter are the keys to the exercises that teach the student to strike with full body weight.

The remarkable thing is that there is no physical contact in karate. "It takes quite a bit of self-control to pull a punch three inches from someone's nose, or kick past an ear, disturbing only a few hairs," Kim remarked.

Karate is as much a state of mind as of physical strength, she pointed out. Related to Eastern mysticism, karate demands that the karate ka, the term for a student of the art, be mentally conditioned not to feel pain.

Kim also explains that women usually pick up karate faster than men, since men have to unlearn so many fighting techniques which are not acceptable in karate. Women are usually in better physical shape too, since they keep themselves physically active doing housework.

Kim reports women enjoy the karate exercises, not only because they are slimming, but also because they are similar to ballet exercises and produce grace and coordination.

Q—Why are modern interviews and discussions called "rap sessions"?

Q—In landscape gardening, what is the difference between bonsai and topiary?

A—Bonsai is the art of dwarfing trees so they are identical with larger ones except in size; topiary is the art of tree sculpturing.

Q—Which is the most intelligent bird?

A—Many scientists rate the crow as the cleverest bird. Scarecrows seldom fool the crow, a cunning corn stealer.

Q—For what is the Sullivan Memorial Trophy awarded?

A—It is awarded annually to the amateur athlete who, by his or her example, has done the most during the year to advance the cause of sportsmanship.

Q—Does the United States still issue $2 bills?

A—Issuance of $2 bills has been discontinued because of a lack of public interest.

Q—Are there any original manuscripts of the New Testament extant?

A—The authors of the original books of the New Testament wrote them on papyrus scrolls, none of which now exist.

What's the Law

Wife Is Sight to See

BY JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Horace discovered the hard way that beauty is only skin deep. After courting Verna for several months, he popped the question and they got married. While she had been a vision to behold, after the marriage she was a sight to see.

She doggedly refused to use makeup or to go to a beauty parlor. In fact, Horace soon became convinced that even a little gunpowder on her face could make an improvement. All his pleadings, however, proved to no avail. He finally sued to end his marriage on the grounds of cruelty.

"I just can't take it any more," he told the judge. "My wife's appearance scares me half to death and she won't do anything about it. I see her in my nightmares and find that I'm not even asleep." "I am what I am," answered his wife, "and I won't be painted over. I don't

If you were the Judge, would you free Horace from his unpainted wife?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that a wife's refusal to use cosmetics or to go to a beauty parlor does not constitute cruelty so as to warrant the termination of a marriage. (Based upon a 1951 Washington Supreme Court Decision)

Susan Holiman Miss Gideon

GIDEON — Miss Susan Holiman was named "Miss Gideon of 1971" Friday night to climax the annual beauty pageant held at the high school cafeteria. The event was sponsored by the Gideon American Legion and Legion Auxiliary.

Miss Holiman, a senior, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holiman. She was presented a bouquet of roses and a trophy, and received her crown from Miss Diane Werner, "Miss Gideon of 1970." Miss Werner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Werner.

Miss Pattie Windham was named first alternate to the winner. A senior, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Windham, and was presented a trophy.

Miss Susan Ashlock, a junior, was selected as the second alternate. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charley Ashlock, and she also received a trophy.

Miss Carol Adams was awarded the coveted "Miss Personality" trophy. She is a senior and is the daughter of Mrs. Kathryn Adams.

Pemiscot Hospital Buys Nuclear Scanner

CARUTHERSVILLE — An advanced diagnostic machine, the Picker Nuclear Magnascanner 500, was recently received at the Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital. The $30,000 machine is being bought on a lease - purchase arrangement. It will do advanced and sophisticated diagnostic work which has not been done in the hospital before.

"Some of its uses will be to find tumors, most thyroid problems, abnormal blood flow, such as blood clots in the lungs, determine total body blood volume, find intra - cranial hemorrage, detect abnormal fat absorption, and the localization of Placental, plus numerous other uses," said Dr. Phil Cheatham, the hospital's Radiologist. Dr. Cheatham works at the hospital three days a week and spends the rest of his time in Memphis.

Before the machine may be used the facility and the radiologist must be licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission. The license has been applied for and is expected to be received in the hospital shortly. To be approved to use the machine the Radiologist must be a doctor, and he must be supervised for at least 40 hours in its use. Dr. Cheatham recently completed his 40 hours training at Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Technicians who will use the machine must be trained and then will work under the supervision of the Radiologist. Ed Woody has completed two weeks on-the-job training in the scanner's use at Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston. Two other technicians will be trained for the machine.

The reason the Atomic Energy Commission is so interested in the machine is that it uses radio active isotopes. The isotopes will not be stored in the hospital at this time as hospital officials have no idea how much the machine will be used. The isotopes lose their "punch" after a short time and as they are rather expensive. Doses will be ordered as they are needed. If an order is placed for a dose before 10 a.m. it will arrive in the hospital the next day, so no problem is expected in the supply. The A.E.C. will supervise the use of the isotopes for safety reasons.

The scanner works basically this way; a particular chemical is given to a patient, either orally or with a shot, and that chemical will locate in the region of the body to be examined. The scanner will then move back and forth above the area, picking up the chemical in the body. A detailed picture of the organ, such as the thyroid, is then produced by the machine. The scanner is different from the X-Ray in that the X-Ray works without the use of the chemicals. It is also not able to go into the body to find problems the way the scanner can.

The scanner will even be able to tell the doctor if an organ is functioning, and to what extent. "We are in the forefront of medical diagnosis with this machine," Dr. Cheatham told The Pemiscot Journal. "We are the only hospital between here and Memphis to have one."

Dr. Cheatham expects the machine to be used as many as ten times a day when area doctoes become familiar with its possibilities. The estimated maximum use of the machine was 30 a month.

Hospital Administrator Jack Tipton said "Before buying this expensive piece of equipment we took into consideration the fact that this machine might not pay for itself, but the board decided that even if one patient's life were saved the machine would pay for itself. Really, can anyone say what a persons life is worth?"

He went on to point out that even though the population of the county is declining the hospital can't allow that fact to dictate whether or not to continue improving health services. "We have an obligation to our patients to provide the best possible service, and that's what we are tryin to do," Tipton continued.

Out of county doctors may refer their patients to the Pemiscot Hospital for diagnosis on the machine. This would help pay for it.

When asked how long the machine would stay usable, not being replaced by something newer or better, Dr. Cheatham pointed out that he expected nothing better to come out within the next eight years. As the machine is improved in the future, however, separate components can be replaced with improved ones, thus keeping the machine at peak ability.

Another new piece of equipment bought recently was a Coulter Counter which counts both red and white blood cells faster and more accurately than humans can do it. To test blood samples now takes about 30 seconds on the new machine while it would take five to seven minutes when done by hand. The tests have been made under a microscope with the technicians counting the cells.

The Coulter Counter cost the hospital $6,800 but will save its cost in a short time sent to the point that the machine had to be bought or another technician put on the staff. The salary the machine will save, will pay its own cost.

Four hundred to four hundred and fifty blood tests are made each month.

attorneys and set the trial date for Dec. 7.

Prosecutor Tom Gilmore said following Kirk's arrest the day after the murder that the death penalty may be asked.

In other circuit court action Leroy Todd of East St. Louis entered a plea of guilty to an auto theft charge. The matter was referred to the probation and parole board for presentencing investigation.

Todd is charged with stealing a pick-up truck from Robert Lassater July 8. He remains in custody in the Scott county jail in Benton.

A guilty plea to burglary and stealing entered by Byron Klingel of Sikeston was referred to the board for presentencing investigation.

Klingel is charged with two other youths of the July 29 burglar of $50 from Tidwell's Gulf Station on North Main. He was freed on bond last week.

Daniel L. Suggs of Sikeston filed an application in circuit court to set aside the revocation of his driver's license. The license had been revoked according to Suggs, when he refused to take a breathalyzer test and was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Judge Craig heard testimony from Sikeston Police Sgt. Leonard Campbell and from Suggs and then denied the motion to reinstate the revoked license.

A burglary and stealing charge against Chester Lee Swinney of Sikeston drew an innocent plea. Craig set the trial date for Nov. 3.

Swinney is charged with stealing checks and a check maker from Jarvis Motor Company in Sikeston in July. He is free on bond.

Burial will be in the Sunset of Memories cemetery in Sikeston.

POLLY'S POINTERS

How Does One Hang Horseshoes Above Door?

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—We have some horseshoes we would like to use in some way but do not know the legend as to the way they should be set above a door or other ways to bring one good luck.—MARGARET

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve concerns household products that come in glass containers that so often have a label wrapped around that almost completely obscures the contents. Whether it is vinegar, medicine or shampoo, I like to check the contents now and then to know when to order more. Why can't such labels be put only halfway or three-quarters of the way around such glass containers?—LINDA

DEAR POLLY—I have help for Mrs. A. C. S., who wants to remove or disguise a small three-letter monogram on her son's gray shirt that is a hand-me-down. Add more embroidery so as to include the present monogram in an embroidered cartoon character, a ball or bat or some symbol he would like.—MRS. S. A. S.

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. A. C. S. could remove the embroidered initials from her son's shirt by putting the material over her knee (wrong side up) and firmly holding it down on both sides with one hand. With the other hand, take a razor blade and lay down flat side against the material and go back and forth in a cutting motion all the way across the lettering, being sure to cut the threads as she goes. Turn material over and pick out the remaining threads with a pin. I did this to my husband's Navy uniform and it worked fine.—KATHY

DEAR GIRLS—If you use a pin to lift the threads to be cut with a razor blade, there is less danger of making a cut in the fabric. I prefer using manicure scissors for such a job.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Like Mrs. A. C. S., I was also given some expensive initialed shirts for my son. I cut a piece from the tail of the shirt to make a pocket that I sewed right over the initials as they were on the left side of the front. Perhaps her son has the insignia of some club he belongs to and that could be sewn over the monogram. —MOLLY

Tractor Wrecks Store Front

PORTAGEVILLE — The downtown Firestone store was struck by a green tractor-trailer at 4:45 a.m. today.

Most of the front of the store, owned by Oliver Dale, was smashed. Police are seeking the damaged vehicle whose driver has not been identified.

NEW CHIEF of Army chaplains is Maj. Gen. Gerhardt W. Hyatt. He is reported cool on the Vietnam war but opposed to clergymen counseling youth to avoid service.

Ichord Speaks At Jamboree

More than 175 delegates from throughout the state attended a closed session at the Flaming Pit yesterday afternoon and the jamboree followed at the Town Plaza Shopping Center.

Officials of the jamboree expected more than 1,000 delegates to attend the jamboree but less than 300 came.

Abram Hirschowitz, attending the jamboree as a delegate, discussed the possibility of establishing nursing homes in Southeast Missouri through the use of Social Security funds.

Hirschowitz said this morning that his proposal calls for using Social Security funds to finance the lodging of the residents of the nursing homes and added the venture would be a combination of county, state, and federal funds.

Each resident of the nursing home would pay a set amount from a Social Security check each month to cover the cost of their lodging and expenses.

He said the proposal would be a model project and added that it should be "Kicked -off" in the Bootheel.

Other delegates, according to Hirschowitz, agreed to discuss the proposal but no action has been taken.

Kirkpatrick Bars Security Firm

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick said Thursday he has issued an order barring Investors Security Corp., a Minnesota firm, its Missouri corporation and its officers from doing business in Missouri.

Investors security has offices in Minneapolis and St. Louis Park, Minn. It has been doing business in Missouri as the I.S. Corp. of Kansas City. Lowell D. Condon and Rufus G. Helm are listed by the secretary of state as the lone officers, directors and stockholders.

Kirkpatrick said the firms have advertised securities for sale in Missouri without having been registered under the Uniform Securities Act.

He said a Minnesota district court has issued a permanent injunction against the Minnesota firm, barring it from engaging in security sales in that state.

ERNEST PERKINS

Ernest Perkins, the new seventh grade teacher from Exeter, New Hampshire, graduated from Southeast Missouri State College in 1970. While attending college, summers were spent working at a lobster pound in Seabrook, New Hampshire, enabling him to pay all of his college expenses at SEMO.

Mr. Perkins at present has no definite opinion of the Oran School, but agrees that the people are friendly, which is a quality of most residents in Southeast Missouri.

Being a first year teacher, he was not able to define any advantages or disadvantages about the school system as yet, but states his foremost reason for choosing junior high si that he believes this age group has more enthusium and less inhibitions than nay others.
